THE ABC'S OF FUEL ECONOMY

Here are some easy tips
to help you get more miles for your gasoline dollar.
Use them all and you can save as much as 10¢ on every gallon!

ANTICIPATE . . .
stops, turns, lights, traffic, hills.

BUFFER . . .
yourself from other traffic;
leave room to react.

CONSERVE . . . momentum by avoiding
unnecessary braking,
turning, accelerating.

DECELERATE . . .
using the natural resistance of the engine, road, tires.

ECONOMIZE . . .
in motion; start smoothly
and quickly; keep a steady pressure on the gas pedal.

FIX UP . . .
your car; maintain correct tire pressure; keep your engine in tune.

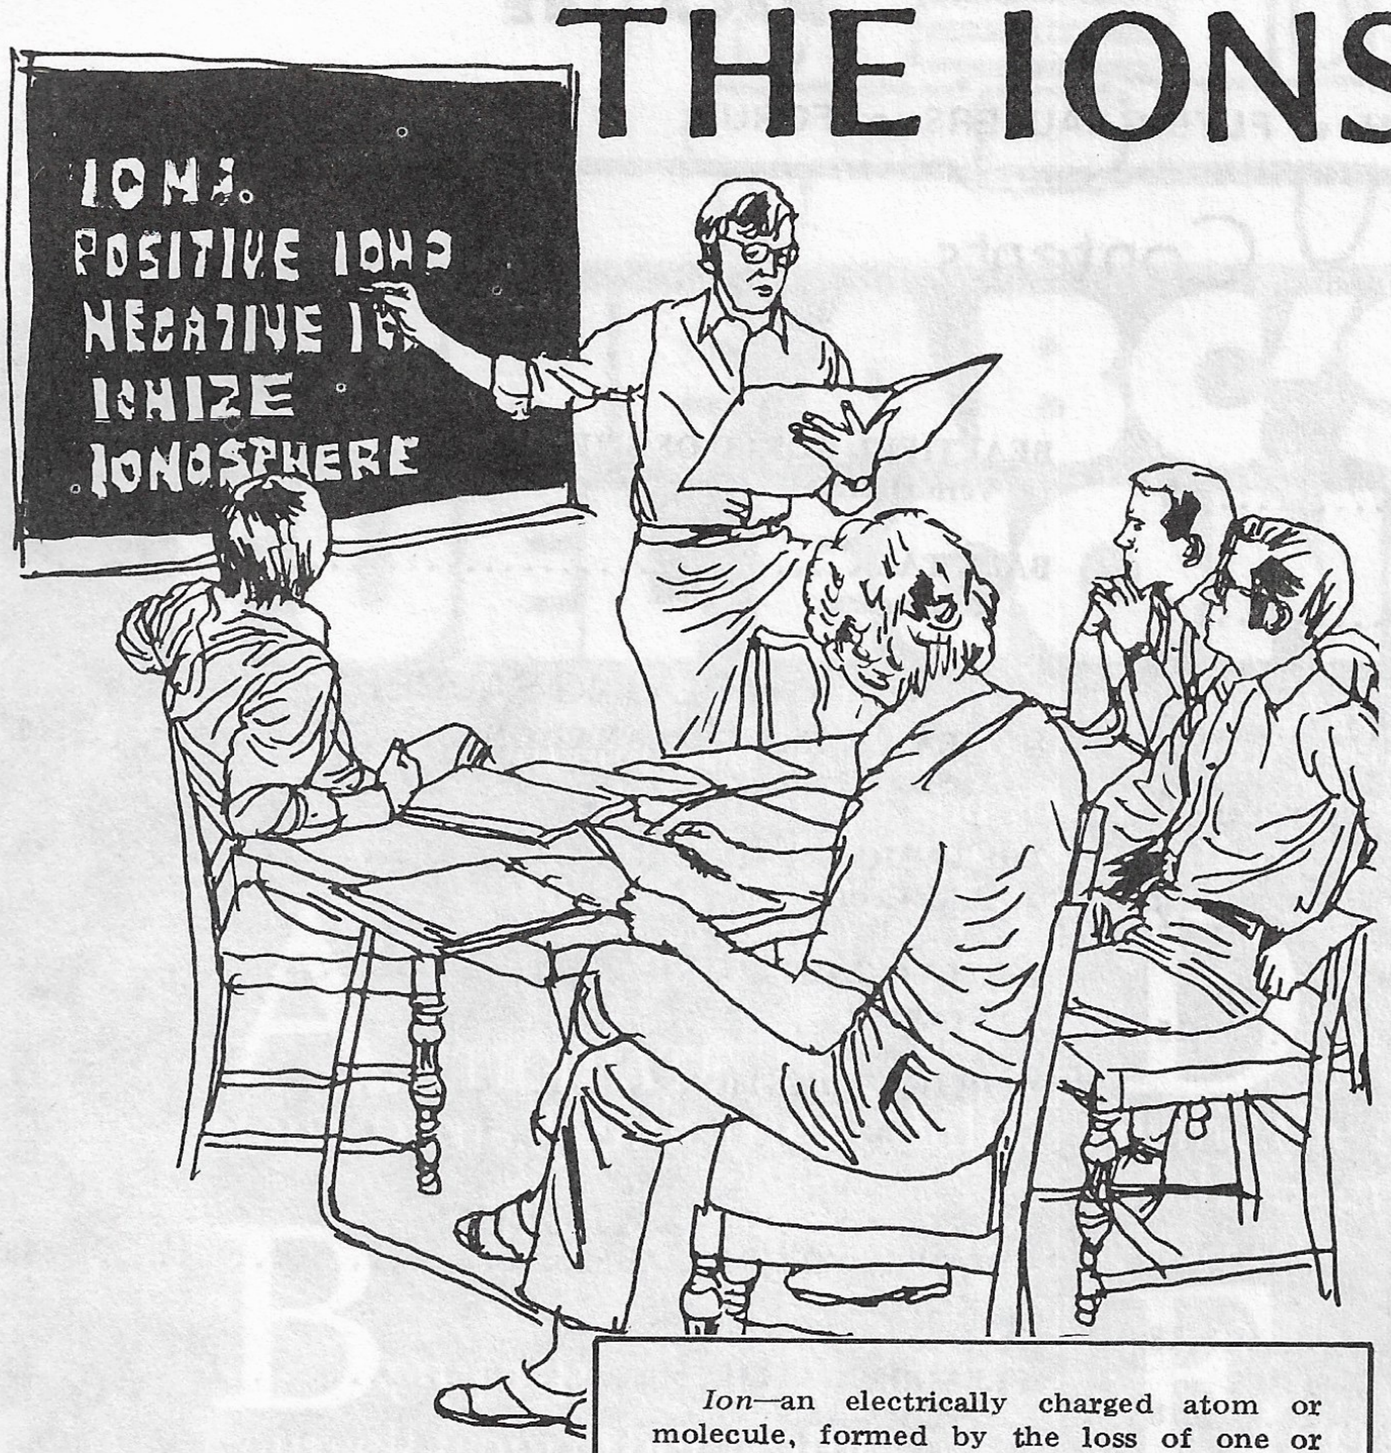
KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE IONS



by HERBERT E. PAUL

Ion—an electrically charged atom or molecule, formed by the loss of one or more electrons.

Positive ions—created by electron loss.

Negative ions*—created by electron gain.

Ionize—to separate or change into ions.

Ionosphere—the succession of ionized layers that constitute the outer regions of the earth's atmosphere beyond the stratosphere (60 mi. to several 100 mi. up).

Keep your eye on this young man, Robert Hammacher, thirty-six years old, who lives with his wife and three small children in the country, and works in an office about twenty miles away. On an early gray morning in winter, he comes out of his house, gets into his little car, and drives to work—gets there on time.

But Robert has problems. Where cars are fewer, like in the country, he gets along fairly well going to work. When he gets into the heavy traffic, near the city, he keeps losing his temper at other drivers, and the whole traffic situation makes him "mad." Sometimes the thing really affects his driving—he can't seem to co-ordinate or concentrate on it. At times he gets sleepy and irritable. By the time he arrives at work, he's not ready to work.

Well, you might say, what's so unusual about that? That happens to everyone at some time or other. That's true, but wait—Bob has more problems. He has so many colds, with sore throats and headaches, that he misses many days at work. He uses up his sick leave days, and has to start using his vacation time. That's inclined to make him and all of the rest of his family unhappy when they plan next summer's vacation.

Robert Hammacher's "office-mates" also have a varied lot of physical and mental problems. In this large office you might find vertigo, sleeplessness, irritability, migraine, nausea, palpitations, many respiratory infections, loss of good sense, and general fatigue.

This list of complaints is easily duplicated in many, many offices—and homes, too—and even have additions. One might call it the common lot of people, but, hopefully, there may possibly be an easy remedy.

The Ionizer

How about an ionizer? It might be called a little magic box". An ionizer gives off negative ions. The FDA will not allow anyone to make medical claims for negatively ionized air, but one advertisement for an ionizer assures greater mental alertness, less sleep needed, more vitality, it cleans dust and smoke out of the air, and kills bacteria. The ad says that positive ions cause "irritability, tiredness, and, if too much in excess, nausea, migraine, and eye disorders."

Positive ions are created in excess by "heaters, appliances, computers, air conditioners, the tubes in TV sets, and high winds". Negative ions, which will make you feel better and improve your environment, they say, are generated by "trees, sunlight, waterfalls, thunder storms, and ion generators"—such as the one they are advertising.

The high winds mentioned above are the ones such as the "Santa Ana" winds in Southern California, or the "Chinook" in the Rocky Mountains. Other parts of the world have these winds, too. However, in our modern world positive ions abound in our artificial living conditions.

It's about time to ask you if you know what an ion is. Ions are electrically charged atoms or molecules, formed by the loss of electrons. Negative ions are created when electrons are gained. Normal air has a ratio of five positive to four negative ions. When one is in a good "negative ion area", the negative ion could be twice as much as the positive. Most people would feel much better mentally and physically, and in good spirits in this atmosphere. That is what is claimed. Don't you feel better when you are standing by a waterfall, or a bubbling stream?

According to an aid for air ionizers, "Mankind Research Institute" in Washington, D.C. has tested all the ion generators they can find. Hopefully they would give out information.

Should Robert Hammacher try an ionizer? Should you? Keep your eye on the ion. Is this the key to euphoria?

HAPPENINGS NOW

THE GIFT OF WANTING TO HELP

Esther is her name. She is a farm wife on a 300 acre farm in Southern Michigan, with three children and fifteen grandchildren. Ever since she was a child she has had visions of things which were going to, and then did, happen. She kept these things mostly to herself because other children would make fun of her, but now her clients, the police, and families she has helped greatly respect her.

She describes herself as a clairvoyant and a psychic. She uses card reading as a tool to help her feel her client's past and future. This she learned from her grandmother, from whom she believes she inherited ability. Esther also uses a crystal ball sometimes, as focal point for her concentration.

Most of her life she has been busy as a mother and farm wife, with not much time in which she could use her talent, but for the past several years she has been seeing, and helping, many more people.

Finding missing children is one of her "specialities". She talks to a parent or someone else who knows the child well, and has had much success in finding the lost ones. After every weekend, especially, parents whose children haven't come home call her. She "sees" them in her mind. She doesn't charge for finding missing persons, nor when the police ask for help.

A group in Lansing of people who were adopted are helped to find their natural parents by Esther. She has a 98% accuracy record in finding them.

She has also had much success in finding things, such as a diamond ring, or a purse. This type of case, and many others where she is asked to predict the future are the kind for which she is paid. She meets her clients in her kitchen, seating them at a round kitchen table, just as her grandmother did. People call or come to her from many parts of the United States.

Esther says, "Most of my close friends are surprised when I don't get things right. But at horse racing or gambling I'm terrible. This gift isn't supposed to be used that way. When money gets to be of prime importance, when you've lost the gift of wanting to help, you run into difficulty seeing things."

Concerning her work she maintains, "I don't feel it's the work of the devil. It's the work of God to help people through bad times."

ANOTHER METAL BENDER

Stephen North says that he first discovered his metal-bending gifts a few years ago when he was watching a TV show in which several children were using the power of their minds to bend metal.

"While I was watching, the spoon in my hand broke in half," said Stephen. "I didn't know what was going on because nothing like this had ever happened to me before.

"After the program, I tried metal bending myself and to my astonishment, I found that if I rubbed things like forks and spoons I could bend them with my mind.

"At first, I was scared to tell my parents because I didn't think they would believe me. Eventually, I told them and soon I was doing some experiments for Prof. Hasted.

"I developed the power to bend metal without actually touching it from a distance of two feet. But I couldn't always control it and some wild things started happening at home. Silverware in the drawer, car keys and clock hands would bend even when I didn't want them to. Sometimes I wasn't aware of it until after it happened."

John Hasted, professor of physics at Birkbeck College in London, has tested this sixteen year old English boy in every scientific way he could devise and considers his teleportation powers so strong and spontaneous that it is frightening and rather dangerous. He says there is no way he could fake his powers. He considers him a boy wonder, as does Elizabeth Rauscher, research physicist at University of California at Berkeley.

Hasted says' "To test his teleportation powers, I put little crystals of metal in sealed transparent capsules. These capsules were then placed in sealed transparent boxes so that we could see the metal crystals inside. Stephen was allowed to hold the boxes—and we watched while the objects disappeared. These teleportation experiments were absolutely scientific."

NEW X-RAY TELESCOPE SEES MUCH MORE

The most sophisticated X-ray telescope ever made is on the National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite which was launched last November, in 1978, and is expected to operate for more than two years.

The X-ray photographs sent back from space show a sky greatly different from the nighttime sky mankind has looked at since the beginning of time. This telescope might be likened to a doctor's X-ray machine. It is sensitive to X-rays instead of light, and sees features which are normally invisible. It picks up radiation from far away stars and galaxies.

The X-ray pictures show five elements common to earth, not seen before outside of our solar system—magnesium, silicon, sulfer, calcium, and argon—so scientists are further convinced that the solar system is made of material produced from long-dead stars. This comes from a theory that the universe began from helium and hydrogen, which eventually combined into higher forms and became the complex elements needed for life.

Supernovae shot them into space, where billions of years later they united to form one mass—planets and stars, like our sun.

The new satellite has also shown that quasars are not the dim stars they had been thought to be, but are really stars which are farther away than the most distant galaxies and very powerful in energy, although smaller than our solar system.

We can only wonder, with awe, what else this X-ray satellite will find.

MYSTERY OF THE FOURTEEN MONTHS

Steven Kubacki was going cross-country skiing on frozen Lake Michigan south of Holland, Michigan on a late February day in 1978. He was twenty-four years old, and a history major at Hope College in Holland.

The next thing he knew was waking up on a Saturday night lying in a meadow forty miles from his father's house in Massachusetts—seven hundred miles from where he had been when he went skiing.

"I didn't know where I was," he said. "I was wearing clothes that weren't mine.

"I started going through a pack which I assumed was mine, and I found maps. I would guess I was hitchhiking.

"I didn't know what the date was until I walked into town and got a newspaper." He discovered it was fourteen months after the time he had gone skiing.

His skis and backpack had been found along the Lake Michigan shoreline, and an intensive search had been made for him. John Kubacki, his father, said that they were told that Steve had slipped under the ice and drowned, but they didn't believe that.

Steve says that he has an unclear feeling that he had done some running. He had some running shoes, and a marathon T-shirt from Wisconsin, and, of course, he didn't know how he got them.

He also has a vague theory about those fourteen months. He thinks he might have had a temporary loss of memory from loss of body heat and exhaustion while skiing. He didn't think he was under any great emotional distress. Things had been going well for him. The lost fourteen months are a mystery to him.

AGATHA CHRISTIE'S LOST KEY

Tamara Rand was conducting a seance as publicity for the film, "Agatha", about the late Agatha Christie. During the seance she fell into a deep trance, and had a vision of Miss Christie. In the vision she saw her on a train, the Orient Express.

She watched her open her handbag and take out a key, then take out a book which looked like a diary, write her name on one of the pages, put the book in a box, and lock the box with the key.

Rand said she grabbed a pencil, and wrote down what she saw. As the trance continued she "saw" Christie on a narrow cobblestone street. Miss Christie went into a building which appeared to be a hotel, called "Para Palas", then rode an elevator to Room 411. When in the room she went to the bedroom door, lifted up a tile and put the key in the spot, then put the tile back in place.

After the seance she got help, and actually found the key—a rusty, three inch long key!

UFO'S TO RECEIVE FRIENDLY THOUGHTS

A fourteen acre airfield near Mt. Rainier has been built for beings from outer space. Members of the New Age Foundation made it and are now building a signal tower with a pyramid-shaped metal device at the top to transmit thought energy from the group members of the Foundation. They plan to form a giant 'battery' by clasping hands in a circle around the tower and thinking friendly thoughts.

Aho, the leader of the New Age, says the thoughts will soar upwards so the UFO's can receive them in space.

THE ORIGINAL "GREEN MAN"!

THE GREEN MAN AND HIS RETURN
by Harold Sherman

The first "Green Man" novel caused such a sensation in its day, that readers wrote Editor Ray Palmer, demanding a sequel. Sherman responded with another novel under the title, "The Green Man Returns," which was published in December 1947. In it, he had the Super Being, Numar, preceded by a Great Light which illumined the entire heavens, as he returned to Planet Earth with a fleet of his fellow creatures, landing at the capitol of every country, at a time when the earth people were in danger of destroying themselves by atomic warfare.

Both novels, reprinted in total, are filled with one precognitive incident after another, many of which have already been transformed from Science Fiction to Fact by actual happenings.

All that remains is for an enactment of the Grand Finale as depicted in Sherman's thrilling denoument—the appearance all over this world of spaceships on a gigantic mission designed to save the earth population from self-destruction.

Here is your opportunity to relive the Past, through these remarkable GREEN MAN novels, and to prepare yourself for the possible Future which may be bringing events that will be destined to affect your life and the lives of all your fellow humans for all time to come!

If an asteroid or large meteorite should collide with the Earth, the consequences could be catastrophic. An exciting motion picture film deals with this unlikely threat. Yet the possibility remains this could be all too real.

METEOR!

At midday on August 10, 1972, a meteor entered the earth's atmosphere over Canada. It streaked across the sky above Western United States with a brightness that appeared to be between that of the full moon and the sun. It's course took it on through the upper atmosphere and back out into space. The nation's leading space scientists admitted that a body capable of producing a fireball of such brilliance would have incinerated a city the size of Denver, Colorado had it struck the earth and the resultant blast would have knocked people off their feet for miles around.

In this century, there have been two major impacts of cosmic objects. The first, on June 30, 1908, when a bright fireball, as incadescent as the sun, flashed across the Russian skies accompanied by tremendous explosions and struck the earth in the forested area of the Tunguska River in central Siberia. Once thought to be a meteorite—now believed to be a comet—it created dozens of craters, some more than 150 feet in diameter. A cloud of dust and smoke rose many miles into the sky and the atmospheric blast wave knocked down men and animals more than 100 miles away. Many windows were broken, walls and buildings collapsed and the seismic disturbance was detected throughout Europe. For many days the twilight skies were brighter than normal because of smoke and dust particles scattered in the upper atmosphere.

The second impact—by a meteorite—occurred on February 12, 1947, north of Vladivostok in the Sikhote-Alin mountain range. The original body broke in the atmosphere into many pieces which came down as an "iron rain" and made more than 100 craters some of them 80 feet wide and 30 feet deep. A wide gray band of dust remained visible for several hours in the daytime sky and gradually settled to earth as microscopic droplets.

Had either of these space missiles struck a heavily inhabited area the damage and loss of life would have been catastrophic. For these "cosmic bombs" produce the same effect as our atomic explosions.

Scientists believe that meteorites are actually parts of asteroids that have been fragmented or shattered as a result of outer-space collisions. Most asteroids are located in the asteroid belt between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. However, there are others called "Apollo Asteroids" whose orbits pass through the earth's orbit as they travel around the sun. These asteroids come closer to us than any other known deep-space objects, except our own moon. It is theorized there are more than a thousand large Apollo objects streaking across our solar system, never discovered until the earth is in the right position and they come very near. Their physical dimensions range from a few meters in diameter to 4 or 5 miles across. At present only 25 known Apollo Asteroids thus far have been sighted and identified. Approximately, one a year is discovered in orbit while crossing the earth's orbit. They have been referred to as "earth grazers" for some have come as close to earth as 500 thousand miles, just twice the distance to the moon.

As recent as February 1978, Dr. Hans-Emil Schuster of the European Southern Observatory in Chile discovered two new asteroids which passed within 8 million miles from earth.

The Threat

The Apollo Asteroid named Hermes, which was discovered in November 1937, by the German astronomer Karl Reinmuth, set a close approach record that still exists. Hermes' calculated orbit brought it to within 194 thousand miles of earth. The only objects that have come closer to earth than 194 thousand miles that we know of have hit earth. Hermes has since been lost to observation, and may be spotted again someday, but only by accident, and meanwhile it's flying around in space with the potential of coming extremely close.

Dr. Brian Marsden of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics says that asteroids of at least one mile in diameter probably hits earth every 1,000 years or so. Dr. Isaac Asimov, the noted author, educator and scientist, calculates that an Apollo Asteroid could strike earth every 50,000 years based on their stable orbits. If anything changes the orbits, that time span could be reduced to today! He reminds us that "Every meteoroid that hits earth and is large enough to make its way through the atmosphere and strikes the ground as a meteorite started as an Apollo-object before the collision."

In 1949, the Palomar Observatory reported that an Apollo Asteroid of approximately one mile in diameter named Icarus was sighted and would pass within 4 million miles of earth at a speed of 100,000 feet per second. Subsequent orbit plotting showed that Icarus' orbit would bring it within potential collision distance every 19 years.

The scientific community, ever mindful of the threat of collision from altered orbits of astreroids, particularly the Apollo Asteroids, conducted exhaustive scientific studies on how to prevent an impending collision.

Project Icarus

One of the studies titled Project Icarus was developed in 1968 by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Here is what the best minds of M.I.T. say would happen in the event that Icarus collided with earth and what could be done to prevent such from happening.

"The orbit of Icarus results in a near miss of the earth every 19 years. While it is true that the only probable way in which its orbit can be brought into a collision orbit is by a glancing blow from some other asteroid as Icarus streaks through the fringes of the asteroid belt beyond Mars, the likelihood is not at all impossible. There is ample evidence that impacts of this nature have occurred in the past: The Barringer Crater in Arizona, 4,200 feet across, is believed to have been formed on impact between 5,000 and 50,000 years ago. Other rimmed circular depressions like the Richat Structure in Mauritania, 75 miles across, the Vredefort Ring in South Africa, 85 miles across, Manicouagan Lake in Canada, 40 miles across, Hudson Bay in Canada, and even the entire Pacific Ocean may have been formed by the impact of Gargantuan projectiles millions of years ago.

The consequences of a collision with an asteroid the size of Icarus would be catastrophic. The impact of Icarus would produce a crater only 10 to 15 miles in diameter and perhaps 3 to 5 miles deep, but its effects would be felt worldwide. The energy involved is the equivalent of 500,000 megatons of TNT—two orders of magnitude above that involved in the largest recorded earthquake, and four or five orders of magnitude more than Krakatoa. The result would be shock waves, pressure changes, and thermal disturbances which would cause earthquakes, hurricanes and heat waves of incalculable magnitude. If the meteorite struck in mid-ocean, tsunamis (tidal waves) in the 100-foot category would cause worldwide damage. Assuming it plunged into the ocean, a thousand miles east of Bermuda, the resulting tidal wave, propagating at 400 to 500 miles per hour, would wash away the resort islands, swamp most of Florida, and lash Boston—1500 miles away—with a 200-foot wall of water. If the impact occured on land, the blast would level trees and buildings within a radius of several hundred miles, and some 108 tons of soil and rockdust would be thrown into the stratosphere, where for several decades it would act to reduce the solar radiation ordinarily received at earth's surface and threaten the triggering of an ice age."

The M.I.T. project took into account the various methods available to avoid the collision. After many months of scientific programming it was determined that a deflection mission utilizing nuclear armed Saturn V rockets would result in a 71% chance of success.

The deflection mission was chosen because the other alternatives—namely, fragmentation—were unacceptable. If a nuclear bomb were delivered to Icarus, the exploding fragments would still collide with the earth, resulting in as much destruction on a more widespread basis. These fragments, or "cosmic bombs," would explode on the earth's surface, demolishing cities and causing tidal waves and earthquakes in more than one area. Even the probability of success on a deflection mission was questionable, since fragmentation might still occur although the main body would be redirected away from a collision with earth. Thus a series of Saturn V rockets would be used, some for the main target, and others for the fragmentation possibilities. The study indicated that the overall success of the mission would be an 86% reduction in damage. The success in dealing with the fragments was problematical. Devastation might be at best reduced but not entirely avoided.

Development of the Film

In 1976, producer Ted Parvin read about Project Icarus as part of his constant search for new ideas from which to create exciting and meaningful motion pictures for the big screen. He brought it to the attention of his partner Arnold Orgolini and together they decided that the subject matter had all the necessary elements for an absorbing adventure-drama film.

For two years they devoted much of their time and energies toward the day when "METEOR" would go before the cameras. Months were spent in assembling a staggering collection of scientific data that covered every known case of a meteorite striking the earth not only to make the film an authentic work but to give script writers Edmund H. North and Stanley Mann a basis for an exciting, tense, absorbing drama. In addition to the extensive research, the filmmakers enlisted a staff of leading authorities in the field of astronomy and astrophysics to serve as technical advisors for the sequences involving the explosions in space that send the deadly shower of meteorites hurtling toward the earth.

Of as much importance as the detailed research was the selection of the individual who would be charged with the responsibility for directing the epic. Their first and only choice was one of the foremost directors in the film industry, Ronald Neame, who directed the first and to date the best of disaster films, "The Poseidon Adventure." Before accepting the assignment Neame suggested a number of script changes which he felt necessary. "I would not have taken on this project if it was just another disaster film," the English director commented during an interview with the New York Times while the film was in production. "After all I made the first. I wanted to deepen and strengthen the characters so the human element of the film would balance out with the power of the special effects. Something about this story idea caught my interest. After "Poseidon," I said 'no more' but "METEOR" has a better reason for being made, I think. For one thing, there are some three-dimensional, or at least two-dimensional characters. For another thing, the question of how to deal with the possibility that large meteorites might hit the earth has been seriously investigated by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. We all know about the craters in Siberia and Arizona, but they were caused by comparatively small ones. This film deals with a threat that could be all too real."

Once Neame was convinced that his suggestions would be followed, he joined the production team and developed a number of story twists, including how to introduce a viable female role.

With the start of principal photography (October 31, 1977), "METEOR" with its $16 million budget, became a major motion picture event and the most monumental film project to be filmed in Hollywood in 20 years.

Toplining the cast are such diversified and honored artists as Sean Connery, Natalie Wood, Karl Malden, Brian Keith, Henry Fonda, Trevor Howard, Martin Landau, Joseph Campanella and Bo Brundin.

With incredible attention to minute detail, production designer Edward Carfagno designed, to exact specifications, the control centers and consoles which were used both at the massive command center set and the NASA set, a gigantic subway terminal and tunnel system complete with train and a to-exact-scale set of the U.N. Security Council Chamber with a replica of the world-famous mural.

The Project Hercules command center set, patterned after NASA's Luna Receiving Lab at Houston nearly filled Stage 27 at M.G.M. The set turned out to be a veritable wonderland of practical (i.e. workable) telemetric gadgetry valued in excess of a million dollars. It is in this complex setting that Sean Connery, Natalie Wood, Brian Keith and Karl Malden work to change the direction of the Soviet and U.S. satellites with their nuclear rockets and are able to watch on giant screens the on-rushing meteorites, their satellites and communicate with other scientists throughout the world via two-way television.

An unbilled "star" of "METEOR" is the gigantic subway terminal and tunnel system set which filled every square inch of M.G.M.'s giant Sound Stage 30. This is the sound stage where Esther Williams filmed her aquamusicals in the huge swimming pool. The "METEOR" subway set took three months to build and is considered the largest three-dimensional set ever erected in Hollywood. It was here that one of the most spectacular, unusual and potentially dangerous scenes ever filmed took place. The scene follows the meteorite impact on New York which causes the river to break through into the subway tunnel where our survivors are trapped and are nearly drowned with mud and water.

At Stage 30, a million pounds of mud was stored in huge tanks built 50 feet above the set. The mud, a special compound of porous clay used by oil well drillers, was released on cue through a network of pipes and sluice gates. For three weeks the actors were subjected to daily baths of the thick, slimy mudmix which came gushing down upon them from all directions, filling up the set until it reached above their waists. Special escape hatches were built into the subway tunnel set and the entire set was reinforced in order to contain the massive weight of the muddy solution.

The daily ordeal suffered by the cast and crew prompted Sean Connery to remark: "This is the most frightening set I've worked on. There are a couple of hundred people working here—and I assume at the end of each day they're still there. We may find a couple of bodies yet."

Fact or Fantasy?

How real are the questions posed in "METEOR"?

Such questions as: Do meteors pose a threat to man's survival? Could a large asteroid change orbit and collide with earth? Is there any defense mankind could muster against such devastating possibilities?

According to producers Arnold Orgolini and Ted Parvin, "METEOR" is only a motion picture with its prime purpose to entertain. They do not want to exaggerate the possible dangers. But on the other hand there is enough scientific data to substantiate a percentage of probability which indicates that there is a potential danger.

All across the country, there is a growing need for OAHSPE, especially among young people who are looking for a faith to live by. There's a growing need for OAHSPE, but many can't or won't go for it "cold turkey" without having previously heard of it through reading some book like this.

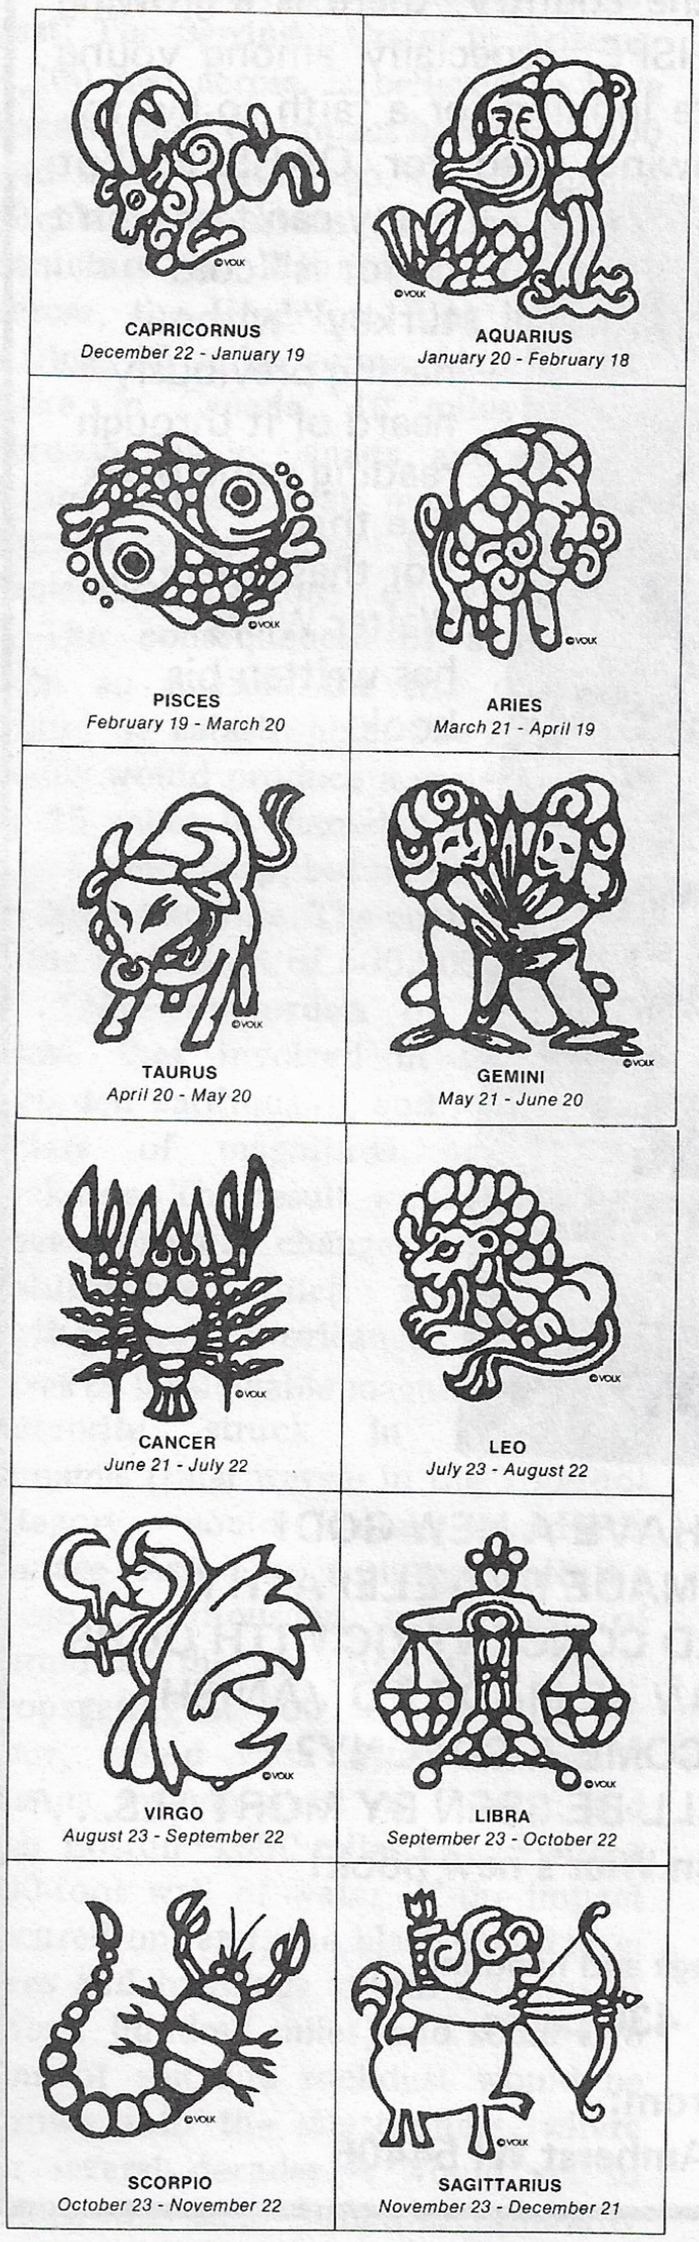
YOUR ASTROLOGY CAPSULE



ARIES March 21-April 20.

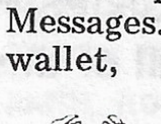
Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: For some Aries, love is found close by, at their job, etc. Might be concern over a co-worker. Home, parental matters are accented now. Continue to watch your health, avoid taking on too much responsibility also. A young person could cause some anxiety, again a lover. . .while with some Aries a legacy matter is important. Avoid burning the candle at both ends and straining your health. Some now change employment and more money should be realized. Aries will be seeking pleasure, adventure. Go slowly in investment, speculation matters, examine well before you invest. Love is exhilarating.

TAURUS April 21-May 20.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Residential changes may come up or just have; again with some Taureans, a parental matter is significant or has some problem about it. Avoid being too complacent in any marital or love matter with Uranus, the planet of the unexpected, still in this angle of your chart; courtship, etc. can be exciting though. Many Taureans buy or sell property now. Be alert in the home and avoid mishaps; steer clear of argument, discord in the home. A new or old love enters the picture. Get along with the one who means something to you. Important papers, could relate to inheritance, signed now. Careful on trips.

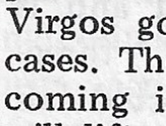
GEMINI May 21-June 21.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Influential contacts help Gemini ambitions now. Love may have been tested, is now more secure. Increase in finances through your own ingenuity. Be alert to possible falls in the home. Home at times is "heavy," but the air sign you are gives you the ability to rise above this if you are philosophical, also if you get out from time to time and don't let such restrictions get you down. Avoid taking on too much in the way of speculation (property) matters that could be financially burdensome. Happiness comes through a new personal outlook you have. Messages. trips important. Watch your wallet, take care of possessions.



CANCER June 22-July 22.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Cultivate optimistic thoughts as with Saturn now in your house of the mind, you may get gloomy from time to time. Financial matters look good, with Jupiter in this angle (money), now and possible expansion in regard to property in this period. Avoid discord over money, property, possessions, also safeguard what you have. Health, job matters at times chaotic or none too reliable; don't neglect health. Love may be exciting, unpredictable. Look within for answers regarding emotional problems. Through hurt pride, you might decide to pull up stakes; if so, don't look back but look to the future instead.



LEO July 23-August 22.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Many Leos will acquire items of beauty or luxury now. Money, possessions, or property come through those older. Background matters important, echoes of things to come. Get enough rest and make an art of relaxation during this hectic period you will be in. Love very exciting now, but avoid a lover's quarrel, even so. Parental (for some Leos), home areas exciting, in some instances unpredictable. Look out for mishaps, quarrels in the home, get up and away from any disturbing influences, Mars in Leo over three fourths of this period could account for such. Unless ill, you will feel as if you could take on the world. Be moderate instead.

VIRGO August 23-September 22.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Saturn in your sun sign may be bringing or have brought problems and/or new responsibilities, but as Saturn is the planet of maturity, it will also bring Virgos good solid judgment, in most cases. Then by early October, Jupiter coming into Virgo for a year's stay will lift your outlook, giving you new courage and vision, opportunities. Could be some slow-up in communications, delays. Be patient though and stay cool. (Virgos can really run the gamut.) A friend, acquaintance or child may cause some concern; social matters lively. Important matters seem held in the background for a while longer. Safeguard health; avoid involvement with strangers.

LIBRA September 23-October 23.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Exciting job changes for some Librans. Could be a clash with one in authority and/or with a parent; again a parental matter causes concern. Don't be hasty and invite some mishap. A friendship or love matter is accented, affording personal excitement. . .but in any close relationship, try to strive for harmony, so vital to all librans! For some the past holds disturbing echoes. . .let it go, Libra! Might be some problem over a relative, again could relate to a trip. Avoid too much involvement with a stranger; the unknown or unfamiliar, "isolated" places, could hold danger or complications.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 21.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: You know Scorpio that Uranus is still in your sign and you are chafing at a few bits. . . this being the planet of youth and freedom, Uranus, the Awakener. So life continues to be exciting, and above all, unpredictable. Might be a problem regarding a friend, again also something regarding a child or young person. Scorpio's prestige rises as recognition of their merit comes. Make haste slowly now—avoid mishaps, quarrels, misunderstandings. A legal matter might be in the offing, could be a bit troublesome. Around this time you seem to be pondering some secret matter, are for the time being indecisive regarding this. But yours is a non-nonsense sign and you will reach a decision. Be realistic in a financial, property matter. Avoid worry, anxiety, jealousy, weeds in your garden. . .you don't need them!

SAGITTARIUS
November 22-December 21.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: With dreamy, impractical Neptune still in your sun sign, often you are the dreamer, the idealist. Yet most "Sags" have likely had a few rude awakenings too, which, if wise, they will chalk up to experience, and they can say they have "lived", in any case. Look to the future, Sagittarius, and know that life is perpetual change, that nothing stays the same. Control an urge for sharp speech now. Safeguard all important papers or documents now. Might be contact with the foreign born; a legal matter may also hold your attention around this time. A friendship may turn into love. A parent, or one in authority, may pose a problem, or cause concern in some way. Social life or social activity takes over later in this period, with Venus in your sign, and your magnetism shines.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Anxiety over a relative could figure now for many Capricorns. Avoid too much pride or arrogance or jealousy—tone down your own accomplishments when necessary. Important papers signed now or before too long; could relate to a parent, possibly. More a stormy period, emotionally speaking, than a serene one. Tread lightly! Get along with partners or some close associate as there is an element of the disturbing around these areas now. You leave friends geographically, or they leave you—there is much change, fluidity in this area, and in fact has been for some time. Again, personality clashes in some instances. Be diplomatic with others. A legal matter drags at first. Don't be careless with important written matters. You are still attracting original, "different" types of friends, because of Uranus in this house (friends) in your chart. You arouse professional envy.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Safeguard health, Aquarius, avoid mishaps too through too much haste or whatever. Life stays exciting yet with tones of the unpredictable too, with Uranus still over your midheaven, for some time to come. Inheritance could figure in the picture around this time or soon, could come to you or the partner or to both of you. The partner (love, marital or business), seems caught up in some special activity or commotion now; avoid discord, quarreling. A veritable vortex may be building up, a clash of wills, temperaments. Your particular talent is unique, recognized now. . .its only close relationships that need adroit handling.

PISCES
February 19-March 20.

Sept.-Oct.-Nov. 1979: Be alert, not too overly idealistic, in all close relationships Pisces, and avoid being disillusioned. There will be certain delays through others, be patient, though; also try to be discriminating, at the same time not expecting "perfection". Then, certain awards coming to you will likely be held up for a time yet, so coast along Pisces, don't try to rush anything and then come up against barriers. A residence change before long. Look within, Pisces; avoid too many stimulants. . . you don't need them at all. Helpful career, business, job contacts. Develop your creative, artistic, musical side, you can earn through this. Don't stand in your own light Pisces; tone down arrogance. . .and be a good listener. Avoid mishaps, watch, safeguard health October and November.

CALM SEAS AND CLEAR SKIES, THEN

TOTAL DISAPPEARANCE

by ALEX SAUNDERS

Validated accounts galore tell of planes and ships that enter the Bermuda Triangle and are never seen again. They disappear, along with all crew members and passengers. No survivors are ever found, nor oil slicks, or flotsam. The disappearances, in one word, are TOTAL.

All types of aircraft have been mysteriously lost. Of all sizes, they include military, commercial and private. The same applies to all kinds of ships, from the smallest to ones gigantically structured.

The weather, at those times, was reportedly good, if not excellent. No violent storms, no hurricanes, no typhoons, no underwater seismic action. Only calm seas and clear skies.

Final messages have been received from planes with the normal and routine "All's well". But, though conditions may have been "well" at the moment of communications, an ensuing event occurred that made it far from normal. This was the failure of all planes to land at their destinations.

Here are some examples of routing flight reports radioed from plane to ground control before the planes vanished, seemingly forever. Just a few examples of many.

January 30, 1948. From the British Tudor IV Star Tiger, when flying north-east of Bermuda from the Azores, came the official report: "Weather and performance excellent... Expect to arrive on schedule." Loss of life of thirty—passengers and crew.

December 28, 1948. With its destination of Miami, Florida, a bare fifty miles away, the pilot of a chartered DC-3 who had left San Juan, Puerto Rico, radioed: "We are approaching the field... We can see the lights of Miami now. All's well. Will stand by for landing instructions. . ." Loss of life of thirty-two—passengers and crew.

January 17, 1949. As it flew between Bermuda and Jamaica, The Tudor IV Star Ariel (sister ship of the Star Tiger) reported: "This is Captain McPhee aboard the 'Ariel' en route to Kingston, Jamaica, from Bermuda. We have reached cruising altitude. Fair weather. Expect time of arrival Kingston as scheduled... I am changing frequency to pick up Kingston." Loss of life of twenty—passengers and crew.

March, 1938. Here we have, not an aircraft, but a freighter, the Anglo-Australian, whose last message of "All's well" was given west of the Azores. Along with its crew of thirty-nine, it was never seen again.

Radio messages actually calling for help have been sent by ships, as witness the following:

During the winter of 1924, the Raifuku Maru, a Japanese freighter between the Bahamas and Cuba, radioed: "Danger like a dagger now... Come quickly... We cannot escape..."

Dan Burack had invited a priest, Father Pat Hogan, aboard his boat, the Witchcraft. As it was Christmas Eve of 1967, the special occasion was to see Miami's enchanting Christmas lights from offshore. From the vicinity of Buoy Number Seven, they stopped, with the shore about one mile away.

Then, for some unknown reason, Burlock called the Coast Guard for help. His exact position was quickly given. A Coast Guard vessel was dispatched to Buoy Number Seven, taking no more than twenty minutes. But during that short period the Witchcraft was gone. Gone, with all aboard, never to be seen again.

There was the case of a pilot who resigned himself to his fate. Unnamed by Charles Berlitz in his book WITHOUT A TRACE (Ballantine, 1978), it occurred in the early nineteen seventies, and goes like this:

"Several years ago a Navy pilot, an American Indian of tribal background, was lost while in radio communication with his base. He appeared to be in some difficulty but did not send an S.O.S. He was then heard to be singing in another language. A friend, also an Indian, was called to the intercom to listen to this sound. He recognized it as the 'death song' to be sung just before one's death. The plane and the pilot disappeared without a trace and without indication of what the pilot had noted to impel him to sing his death song."

Charles Berlitz, in the above book, describes public reaction to his former book, THE BERMUDA TRIANGLE (Doubleday, 1974), that started in late 1974.

Forbidden To Reveal Their Stories

From all over the world, he received many corroborative reports from people describing their own personal experiences in the Bermuda Triangle. They were ex-service personnel forbidden by their commanding officers to reveal their stories publicly until they had been investigated. How the investigations turned out was never told to them.

Now, out of the services, they were anxious to tell their stories to Berlitz.

Other reports came to him from airline pilots as well as ships' captains, crews and passengers. Their first submitted reports to the authorities were later inexplicably "lost". And, unaccountably missing, too, were some of the pages of the logs of ships.

Now let us examine some of the true stories of several missing ships and planes that have been observed to penetrate localized patches of what appeared to be uniquely-formed clouds, mist or fog. They were clearly seen by witnesses to enter, but never leave.

Like A Giant Ice Cream Cone!

Let us note how one observer described his encounter with this particular "cloud" phenomena. He was Jerry Osborn, and will be quoted from WITHOUT A TRACE.

"I was stationed at Kindley Field, Bermuda, in January, 1966. My rank was AX-3, an anti-submarine war technician. On the 6th or 18th of January we were flying a routine patrol mission between Bermuda and Puerto Rico. It was between 1 and 3 A.M.: the night was clear, the flying conditions were excellent. We were about 400 miles south of Bermuda flying at an altitude of approximately 4000 feet.

"Suddenly two very unusual clouds came into view at a flying time of about 5 minutes away at our approximate altitude; one was a long inverted triangle 250 to 300 feet long, pointing down while the other had the shape of a well-defined puff, about 150 in diameter, hanging above it. Both were luminous. My first astonished thought or comparison was—someone has made a cloud in the shape of a gigantic vanilla ice cream cone and separated the ice cream from the cone.

"I had a very clear view of it because I was acting as duty observer and was located in the upper starboard observer's seat. Even so I would not have believed what I was looking at if all the other crew members had not seen the same thing. The two clouds were just hanging there in the empty sky.

"As we came closer I noted that the space between the puff and the cone was about 200 feet and appeared to be empty. As we approached, our pilot started to make a pass at it and fly across it, but just as we began to make a pass and while our photographers were snapping pictures of the crazy formations, an extremely bright searchlight or beam came out of the space between the cone and the puff, scanned the area where we were flying for a couple of seconds and then locked on our plane. It stayed locked in on us for as long as we were there—about 6 seconds. At this point our pilot broke contact; we wanted to put some space between us and whatever was happening. When we returned to base we made a report and turned in all the pictures that he had taken. We never saw them or heard anything more about the report. We later asked our officer about it. He said he did not know anything about it. He did not seem to want to talk about it but said maybe it had something to do with fallout from one of our space shots. That might explain the cloud but it certainly would not explain the bright light that focused on us and stayed on us from the space between the clouds."

"Everything Is Wrong. . .Strange. . ."

Brief messages from pilots have hysterically described the sudden strangeness of the water below their planes. The five TBM Avenger torpedo bombers that left Fort Lauderdale, Florida, on December 5, 1945, is one of the better examples.

On a training patrol flight winging due east over the Atlantic, they all disappeared—five planes with crews totaling fourteen. A PBM Martin Marine bomber was sent aloft to find them. It, too, carrying a crew of thirteen, never returned. However, radio messages at 3:15 P.M. were earlier transmitted back to base from one of the TBM bombers at the Fort Lauderdale Air Station Tower, in these words of Flight Leader Lieutenant Charles Taylor:

"Calling Tower. This is an emergency. We seem to be off course. We cannot see land. . . Repeat. . . We cannot see land."

Tower: "What is your position?"

Lieutenant Taylor: "We are not sure of our position. We cannot be sure just where we are. . . We seem to be lost. . ."

Tower: "Assume bearing due west."

Lieutenant Taylor: "We don't know which way is west. Everything is wrong. . . Strange. . . We can't be sure of any direction. Even the ocean doesn't look as it should."

Now, maybe I am indulging in pure fantasy, but the possibility remains that this could be an instance where a plane entered the first stages of another dimension. And, as it flew deeper into that dimension with the terrain beginning to show its alienness, the plane's radio was cut off.

Next we come to an eye-witness account of a plane's one-way penetration of a "cloud".

The observer was Victor Haywood of Wakefield, Berkshire, England, a former Bermudian. Back in January of 1960, he was working on the Satellite Tracking Program. As two civilian firms were connected with the program—English Electric of Stafford, England, and Construction Management of New York—Haywood was no stranger to the Military Air Base at Kindley Field, Bermuda. He was, in fact, a daily visitor, and describes his story thus:

"About 1300 hours on a bright, almost cloudless day, five Super Sabres (fighters) of the American Air Force took off from the military airbase at Kindley (St. Davids) Bermuda. This writer, along with four or five others who worked on the island, watched the take-off with interest because the Super Sabre was a relatively rare aircraft then—at least insofar as appearances in Bermuda were concerned.

"With the assistance of their after-burners the aircraft were soon airborne. They formed up and flew into a large cloud approximately half a mile offshore. The whole of that cloud, at least the two dimensional circumference of it, was entirely visible to us watchers; at the same time the five planes were on shore tracking radar, this being a normal approach and depart procedure laid down by the military authorities.

"Five fighters went into the cloud, four emerged on the other side. The radar tracking sets never saw a 'fall' despite the aircrafts' altitude of several hundred feet. We never saw anything fall either! Within minutes the loss of the Super Sabre was reported and a search instigated almost immediately—it was merely half a mile offshore and the water quite shallow. There was never anything found to indicate a crashed aeroplane except a life-jacket of standard Air Force pattern. This was never seriously considered as belonging to the missing machine because, Bermuda being garrisoned by thousands of military personnel, and many Islanders owning sailing vessels—well, human nature being what it is, scores of Bermudians had Air Force life-jackets which they weren't entitled to have. That piece of merchandise found during the search could have just as easily come from that quarter as any other.

"There was never a satisfactory answer as to what happened to that aircraft or the pilot. Needless to say an intensive investigation conducted by the USAF produced no explanation nor shed any light on the mystery."

Not only was Victor Haywood an observer to this amazing incident, but other witnesses were also on the ground, in the air, and aboard surface craft.

With five planes entering the "cloud", only four came out. One remained inside, never to be seen again. Why the entire five did not meet the same fate (of slipping into another dimension?) might be answered this way:

Maybe the "lost" plane, within the cloud, passed into a separate "patch" of space which was the ACTUAL entrance into a foreign dimension, while conditions surrounding the entrance "patch" could be traversed in complete safety. Only the door in a brick wall, remember, will allow entry beyond. Only the door, not the unyielding bricks around it.

Consider, now, an event that occurred on December 16, 1974. Don Parris and Kelly Hanson were passengers of a Cesna 172, piloted by experienced Mike Roxby. In their flight to Haiti, instrument malfunction happened when they passed Bimini. When four radios went dead, Mike was forced to navigate by the sun.

Though landmarks were unfamiliar, he landed on a clear area between sugar cane fields. After several approaching inhabitants indicated they were Cubans, Mike left quickly.

Once airborne, he thankfully made contact with another plane and was thus able to establish a course to Great Inagua in the Bahamas. Again the radio fell silent. His goal reached, Mike descended for a landing. Later, as Kelly Hanson said:

"One second everything was clear and we could see the airstrip perfectly. Then we were suddenly in the middle of a swirling cloud that just appeared from nowhere."

The plane crashed. Kelly and the other passenger, Don Parris, survived. Pilot Mike Roxby lost his life. The plane, of course, did not vanish. Not in this case. Could it be that once inside the "swirling cloud", the actual entrance "patch" was not reached to cause the plane's disappearance? Unlike the previous Victor Haywood case of four surviving planes, Mike's plane plummeted earthward. Why? Well, it could be that with the appearance of the "cloud", unknown forces activating the entrance "patch" inside the cloud went awry (a rare event) and caused the plane to crash.

On Shipboard
The Compass Was Spinning

Up to now, we have been discussing the entry—but not the exit—into "clouds" by aeroplanes. But how about lower "clouds", those on oceanic surfaces? Yes, these localized "clouds" or thick "fog" or "mist" have been reported many times on sunlit days. Ships have been observed that sailed into them without ever reappearing. Charles Berlitz described an account of a NEAR-vanishment of 1966 in THE BERMUDA TRIANGLE, the case of Captain Henry.

In the mid-fifties, Captain Henry owned a Miami-based salvage company called The Sea Phantom Exploration Company. In his own words:

"We were coming in on the return trip between Puerto Rico and Fort Lauderdale. We had been out for three days towing an empty barge which had carried patroleum nitrate. I was aboard the Good News, a hundred-and-sixty-foot long tug of two thousand horsepower. The barge we were towing weighed twenty-five hundred tons and was on a line a thousand feet behind. We were on the Tongue of the Ocean, after coming through the Exumas. The depth was about six hundred fathoms.

"It was afternoon, the weather was good, and the sky was clear. I had gone to the cabin in back of the bridge for a few minutes when I heard a lot of hollering going on. I came out of the cabin onto the bridge and yelled, 'What the hell is going on?' The first thing I looked at was the compass, which was spinning clockwise. There was no reason that this should ever happen—the only place besides here I ever heard it to happen was in the St. Lawrence River, where a big deposit of iron or maybe a meteorite on the bottom makes the compass go crazy. I did not know what had happened, but something big was sure as hell going on. The water seemed to be coming from all directions. The horizon disappeared—we couldn't see where the horizon was—the water, sky and horizon all blended together. We couldn't see where we were.

"Whatever was happening robbed, stole, or borrowed everything from our generators. All electrical appliances and outlets ceased to produce power. The generators were still running, but we weren't getting any power. The engineer tried to start an auxiliary generator but couldn't get a spark.

"I was worried about the tow. It was tight but I couldn't see it. It seemed to be covered by a cloud, and around it the waves seemed to be more choppy than in other areas.

"I rammed the throttles full ahead. I couldn't see where we were going, but I wanted to get the hell out in a hurry. It seemed that something wanted to pull us back, but it couldn't quite make it.

"Coming out of it was like coming out of a fog bank. When we came out the towline was sticking out straight—like the Indian rope trick—with nothing visible at the end of it where it was covered by a fog concentrated around it. I jumped to the main deck and pulled. The damned barge came out from the fog, but there was no fog any place else. In fact I could see for eleven miles. In the foggy area where the tow should have been, the water was confused, although the waves were not big. Call me Nero, not Hero—I wasn't going back to find out what it was that was back there."

Well, this could be a close call, a case where a vessel, the empty barge, was almost caught in another dimension.

Ships and planes are disappearing through unknown and mysterious forces. But are they still NATURAL forces? Can it be that in the Bermuda Triangle area there exists anomalies including weather, magnetic and gravitational fields? Forces, let us say, that can cause instant (or near-instant) disintegration to planes and ships and all luckless souls aboard?

Or, more ominously, are they vanishing into another, liveable dimension—or universe—with no chance whatever of returning safely to Earth?

THE OAHSPE CIRCLE

Feel good because you were able to help someone with a kind word, or even a smile. Sharing!

Rejoice because you know that His Presence gives you Life, and it is your privilege how you express it.

Be thankful that you have the ability to shed Light wherever you are. Vibrate with a far reaching Love that He has made possible to energize. Express a tenderness towards all His children, because they are HIS, and you are His child also.

Welcome the labor of your hands, because you are building yourself a special haven in His Heavens. Every minute is precious as the hours and days slip by in a harmonious sequence.

Life is so worth-while, if you live a minute at a time, according to His ever-present guidance!

Every heart beat says "I AM HERE", and you are in tune expressing that Melody. Every minute is great! Live life a minute at a time.

Thank you My Creator! The future is here now, A MINUTE AT A TIME.

TWO OAHSPE STUDY GROUPS

Dear Friends,

I have had two OAHSPE study groups in my home over the years and last September started a third. We are in our 40th session and all is going very well; so well, in fact that one of my students is beginning a class of her own. She will continue to attend my Thursday night classes and I am helping her with her lesson plans. We hold covered dish dinners (vegetarian, of course) for special OAHSPE holidays and celebrate all birthdays with small gifts and cake. The meetings are always opened with a prayer, then the chanting of the Father's names. After the lesson, we sing again and close with a prayer. It is at that time that we begin our healing sessions and doctors in spirit come in. I must say we do over-load them at times but they are so gracious and never complain.

I am clairaudient but a number of the students are clairvoyant and watch the doctors at work as well as visitors from the other side at our classes. Many of the students recognize their loved ones who visit and are also learning about the Oahspe!

Two weeks ago we had a guest from England, Eric Clarkson. He is a Faithist and his father before him studied the OAHSPE also. He was a most delightful guest and we enjoyed his stay with us. There are two Faithist churches in England he told us and I wanted to know why they aren't called Temples since OAHSPE uses "Temples" for places of worship by Faithists and never mentions church. He said he had nothing to do with the namings. Oh, well!

He also visited with the Harmons and with Erma Jean and Gisella (who publish the Kosmon magazine). I also have a Faithist friend from Africa. He is extremely clairvoyant and a marvelous, sensitive man. Like myself, he is a writer, and we spend endless hours on the phone discussing books, plays and movies that will be of interest in the Kosmon era. I have a

A CONDENSED VERSION OF OAHSPE

A MYSTERIOUS, ASTOUNDING, MARVELOUS BOOK! SENSATIONAL, AMAZING STORIES OF MIRACLES, PSYCHIC PHENOMENA, SPACE SHIPS AND OF LIFE AFTER DEATH. FACTUAL AND SCIENTIFIC! THIS WONDER BOOK PSYCHICALLY WRITTEN BY DR. JOHN B. NEWBROUGH AND FIRST PUBLISHED IN 1882.

LAURA HORST

The immensity of that profound book, OAHSPE, which contains 1008 pages, discourages many from delving into its sensational contents. It contains a great mass of amazing information on the history of Earth for 79,000 years, ethical, moral and spiritual teachings of the world's great religions, and at the same time is a textbook of science as known to the ancients and now becoming known to modern man. This condensed book has been prepared for readers who do not have the time or patience required to read and analyze so profound a work. Yet today's young adults are seeking for truth and reality, and more detailed information about their destiny. This book answers hundreds of questions, tells a most interesting story about the origin of mankind on Earth, and his development through the numerous past cycles of time. More importantly, it gives a preview of life's eternal progression after mortal death.

INFORMATION WANTED

Missing Information

● Dear Ray,

In your SEARCH mag. spring 1978, in the OAHSPE Circle I find my letter printed to you. At the last I find that you state (address unknown). I must have forgotten to give you my address at the time of writing this letter.

Please give me an answer to my question in this letter as it is still on my mind.

I would like to know if there is any recent knowledge about the missing information that was taken out of the original writing—part of the Book of Ben and others, you state in your addendum of the OAHSPE. Thank you.

HELP!

Chers amis,

Je suis très interesse dans l oeuvre dont vous suivez les enseignements, c est à dire, Oahspe. Je ne connais pas du tout la langue anglaise, mais, etant donne mon desir d apprendre davantage et d arriver à trouver la Verite, j ai reussi à lire, à l aide d un dictionnaire, quelques lettres en anglais de groupes americains qui etudient "Oahspe" et meme deux pages publicitaires publiees dans la revue "Search Magazine" des Etats-Unis, le tout concernant ce livre extraordinaire que vous possedez.

Je me suis permis de vous ecrire cette lettre à l objet de vous poser la question suivante:

Pouvez-vous me faire savoir si vous connaissez des groupes d etude d'Oahspe, d'expression francais, qu'ils habitent soit en France, en Belgique, au Canada, etc.?

Si oui, etes-vous en mesure de me faire parvenir leurs adresses?.

Je voudrais me mettre en contact avec eux afin de leur demander s ils possèdent le livre "Oahspe" en langue francaise, car malheureusement, je ne peux pas le lire en anglais pour les causes precedemment commentees.

J espère recevoir bientot vos nouvelles, et en vous remerciant d avance, je vous prie de croire, chers amis, à l expression de mes sentiments franternels et devoues.

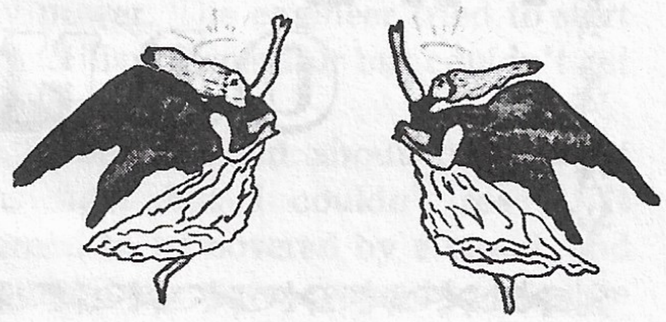
A FANTASTIC OCCULT BOOK

The Two Angels Twangela & Tarmela

by GLADYS MARIE SHARP



STRANGERS IN OUR MIDST
FROM OTHER WORLDS

"THE TWO ANGELS—TWANGELA AND TARMELA" surely has to be the most fabulous love story of the century!

In the deepest sense, it concerns the life of each human being. It is mystical in depth, eternal in scope, unrivaled in beauty. Much revealed is very sacred. Yet, it is hoped through this sharing to inspire and encourage many who may similarly seek while feeling that they somehow are different and so become afraid to speak out, or to tell their innermost dreams.

Too this story is for those who ar NOT afraid, but merely discouraged, feeling that their most profound hopes, prayers and dreams are somehow fruitless.

It is said that we give our dreams a fighting chance, IF we do not give up on them. The character portrayed in this story is real, his quest—a driving force, the imprint of a powerfilled dream from which comes his search for TWO ANGELS—living as human beings on Earth.

OAHSPE staggers the imagination!

What IS the real history of the human race on this planet (and on all others)? What is Man's beast? What are the secrets of submerged continents, of the Great Pyramid, of the Sphinx? What it the history of the Earth's major religions? Do they exist on other planets?

Do you think flying saucers are new? Then read OAHSPE! A whole panorama of aerial and space vessels, described as though from today's newspapers.

Do you wonder at Einstein's theories? Then read OAHSPE! He could have gotten his information there! Uncounted thousands of tons of meterorites fall to Earth each day, yet space is nearly empty of them. OAHSPE knew it in 1882! Space is dark, say our daring astronauts. So did OAHSPE in 1882, and tells us why! Archaeologists have made amazing discoveries of ancient races and dead cities and civilizations since 1882. They might have discovered them sooner had they read OAHSPE.

Just where is Heaven? What do you do there? Is there anything for YOU to do when you get there— what kind of occupation? Is there really a Hell? Who manages the Earth, the Solar System, the Universe—and how? How do the different religions fit into God's one Universe? OAHSPE tells all this, and a thousand more answers to man's most difficult questions.

A history of the higher and lower heavens and of the earth for the past 24,000 years; also a brief history of the preceeding 55,000 years. An explanation of all the world's religions; the cosmogony of the universe; the creation of the planets, of man; new commandments applicable to the present day; the unseen worlds. Written in 1881, OAHSPE's science is today being confirmed by space satellites, new archaeological discoveries and many other sources.

TRUE EXPERIENCES

THE INDESTRUCTIBLE PIECE OF METAL
by Ed J. Clark

In 1947 I had been doing some gold mining, Placer, and I decided to check a small stream's gravels by panning to see if there might be any color in them. This was in the western part of North Carolina and was on property owned by my father.

I had panned a couple pans of gravel and only saw a few small specks of gold. On my next try I saw a bright metallic piece of metal, pear-shaped and about the size of a large bean or pea. I kept it and thought it might be platinum.

Harder Than a Diamond

I made tests on it by boiling in acids—aqua regia, nitric acid, sulphuric acid, and hydrochloric acid, which in no way affected it. I next tried scratching it with diamond—with no results except a very faint scratch on the smooth surface of the rough diamond.

I took it to the shop and heated it to a bright glow with the accetelyne torch. It would not melt, didn't change color, or show any change from the high heat of the torch.

I was puzzled by this time so placed it on the anvil and tried to break or flatten it. It only left dents in the anvil and hammer, and kept its shape. Then I reheated it with the torch and tried to flatten it with the hammer and anvil dial. No results.

I put it in a bottle with some small gold nuggets and eventually forgot it.

Later, I took a job with Utah Construction on a dam they were building on the Cheyenne River out of Hot Springs, South Dakota. I sold the gold to a local rock shop in Hot Springs, along with the forgotten mystery metal object.

"IT" TRIED TO GET INSIDE MY SON
by A. Rodehn

When my younger son was twelve, my husband, a Rosicrucian, doing some research, persuaded the boy to allow himself to be hypnotized. BUT, when it came to the bit, his mind refused to make room. He mumbled and protested. His father persisted until brother, sister and mother protested that something was wrong and the experiment must be ended.

Then, my husband gave in. Telling the boy to remember what had occurred, he called him out of the trance. The boy appeared to be a little afraid as he came to, and when asked what had happened, he said, "I saw something grey that tried to get into me."

When asked if he could define it better, he replied, "I don't know what it was. It was just a grey mass."

THE STRANGE INVADER
by Joseph A. Covola

This is only one of hundreds of incidents in which the unreal, the bizarre, the psychic world became a part of my everyday life.

My two partners and I lived on the edge of the city. My partner's wife and I were sitting in the front room, and our pet dog, Wimpy, was sitting on my lap. Suddenly the heavy front door, which was locked, burst open with a bang. The dog, badly frightened, jumped up in the air and then ran behind some furniture. He wouldn't come out all day! The room was full of sulphur fumes. It was so bad that I had a terrible headache all day.

This incident was only the beginning of many psychic experiences in my life.

PREMONITION OF A PIT ACCIDENT
by Katherine B. Troker

My daughter had her bedroom upstairs while mine was downstairs. During the night she came down to my room and asked me to listen to something strange. In the corner of the room next to the ceiling, was the sound of a motor running, resembling that of a sewing machine, the old fashioned kind. This sound lasted for three quarters of an hour.

The following day I was impressed to visit a woman living one half mile from us, who at one time was my mother's housemaid. I knew of no earthly reason to go there but had a strong impression to do so. With nothing in particular to talk about, I happened to remark to Mr. Freilich about our experience the night before.

The next morning he said to his wife, "I'm not superstitious, but I'm not going in to work today." He had his own reason for not doing so. Mr. Freilich worked in a pit some miles away. That day there was an explosion in the pit. The motor up in the corner of the pit stopped, causing the explosion. He said my story of a motor running in a corner came as a warning—especially for him!

According to those who see auras, "Marsha" has the brilliant emerald aura particular to healers. During several extended sessions, she shared some of her experiences both in her healing ministry and on the astral levels. Her concepts are summarized. They are not only remarkable but pose many important questions as to understanding our universe.—R.P.A.

INTERVIEW WITH AN ASTRAL HEALER

by DR. RONALD P. ANJARD

"Marsha" heals both on the physical and astral levels. She prefers astral healing because it requires less effort—less energy—on her part. Her astral self has been seen "working on" several people including a personal friend. In her interview, she described that she has been observed astrally working a two hundred plus pound man. He was seen sharply jerking and twisting in his sleep. But in reality, he was actually adjusting his own spinal cord by skillfully moving his own muscles...with her aid.

But another story needs to be told. One of the gals who had attended the first interview session had had a serious rib separation several months earlier. She had visited several prominent doctors without success. On the day following "Marsha's" sharing, "Vicki" traveled with other friends to a "fat farm" about a thousand miles away. All the way, she had been frustrated that she wouldn't be able to do all the exercises with the troup. She had even wrapped herself with a huge "ace" bandage. Upon arrival, the resident nurse tried to relieve some of the continual pain and the frustration. Late that night, "Marsha" appeared to "Vicki"—a thousand miles away. According to "Vicki", she saw "Marsha" from the waist up and described in detail the blouse "Marsha" was wearing and which "Vicki" had not seen before. When they were done, "Vicki" was completely cured. The next day "Vicki" proceeded to complete all the strenuous activities including mountain climbing just like all her friends. No one, especially the nurse, could understand how she suddenly could do these exercises. It was as though she had never been injured. It was only late the next night that she finally confided her unique experience. Her separated ligaments have been completely cured and she's had no pain since "Marsha's" visit.

When asked if she has always been a healer, her answer was a simple "no". It was only in the past seven years that she had developed her understandings and techniques. She did confide that as a youngster she'd place her consciousness inside plants, trees and "become one with them". By learning how to heal her own problem, she realized not only how to heal, but that she could heal others. Her personal situation dealt with her spine in which she had muscle and disc problems. She worked during several years with each muscle so she could align each disc and straighten out her entire spine.

During her regular employment, she occasionally meets co-workers with various problems and afflections. Several years ago she was hired to edit an author's book. But she had great difficulty communicating with him because he could only say 3 or 4 words at a time. Working together was a serious problem. But it was resolved by her astral nightly visits in which she'd communicate telepathically with him. In this state, he had no affliction. Initially he didn't understand how he was receiving her thoughts. But she not only explained what was involved but helped in his own cure. This took several months.

"Marsha" confided that she does not actually heal. Somehow she communicates with the person and they perform—somehow—their own healing. A healer needs to have permission to heal. The person can ask for or need help. According to "Marsha" it must be the soul desire rather than an apparent conscious desire. As an astral healer, "Marsha" finds the sick because of their "discordant vibrations". She detects these by seeing, feeling—sensing. The person will actually "flash" their aura—subconscously—if they are seeking help. Just like a warning beacon sends out its message. It's possible, also, to feel the pain—to literally experience it—to help understand their problem. It's also possible to interfere. If one is healed who shouldn't be, then the illness can be assumed directly by the healer. For example, if the illness was to be a means for personal growth, healing would deprive that entity of this important learning opportunity.

Another nurse, a personal friend who attended both interviews, mentioned that she observed, or personally knew about, several actual tumors and ulcers which had transformed. Having a great professional respect for this nurse for over 20 years, her comment adds significant support to Marsha's" concept. Someone had told "Marsha" that they had seen her aura bending toward a patient at a stage of her ministry when she was not aware of the interference rule.

She Has Seven Levels of Consciousness

"Marsha" surprised some of those present when she disclosed that she had seven known concurrent functioning levels of consciousness. The four highest energy levels are used for research and data collection while the lower three levels are used in healing. The "closest" or lowest level provides the most healing. She knows when each of these levels has "left" or is "out", and she usually knows where they are. A facial signal system was developed for friends so that they can know when a "level" or more is "out". In the interviews, "Marsha" signaled to our group. A pink flush on top of her cheeks meant that one level was "out". When asked about the role of her levels, we were told that one level was "visiting" a meeting—a meeting going on elsewhere in our town and at the same time. In addition to the collection source, this level was exerting a calming influence for someone there even though this person could not see "Marsha" per se.

After astral healing, "Marsha" doesn't know whom she has helped. She may remember vibrations but only on rare occasions does she remember the actual person. Remember that she first learned to heal herself and then progressed on to help others using higher levels. "Marsha" is now "a universal healer" as are others. She may travel a large area or a predetermined area to help others. She has not always been a healer, much less a universal healer. She had to develop her abilities and understandings.

To explain how she learned astral healing, the reader needs to know that "Marsha" believes that she had been a healer in a past life. Obviously "Marsha" believes in reincarnation. In learning the mechanics of healing during astral projection, she was taught by her father in a past life. He was a guide—a teacher. In one of her first lessons, she was taken out over the ocean. There she was taught to see through the external and determine the skeleton of a large sea vessel. Later she was taught about the role of muscles and other parts of the physical body—especially the spinal column. She confided that she has had about twelve teachers on the astral level teaching her techniques and meanings.

One of her astral healing efforts had a very strong negative effect. One man had decided to end all his problems and was driving to his planned death. While about to complete this "destiny", "Marsha" astrally loomed on the highway before him. He was so scared that he didn't kill himself. And he also didn't mention this appearance to anyone, much less her. After one year of keeping this buried inside, somehow they got together to discuss it. He freely admitted that he had seen "her" and this had stopped his death desire. However, the results of her action were so strong and so negative that she has learned a life-long lesson. She has never since tried to help anyone who didn't ask—who didn't flash their aura—whose soul didn't cry out for help. This young man has still not forgiven her for her interference.

During all these sharings, we learned portions of how "Marsha" learned astral projection. Learning, simply, was in stages. Somehow a color wheel was used. At one point of development a veil appeared to block her continuation. When she learned how to become "part" of the veil, she could go through. To get into the astral, she had to learn to "let go"—not to force the situation. It is possible to pre-program where she wants to go. Years ago, I had interpreted Einstein's theory to mean that there is no time in the fourth dimension. And according to "Marsha", "it's going from time to non-time". Everything in the past, present and future in in the "now".

"Marsha" told us that the Askashic Record is available to all. However, the major problem is one's ability to transfer this information back to the conscious mind. "Bits and pieces" have been brought back but she has not been able to convert major sections of knowledge at a given time. All the information is there, instantly available according to "Marsha".

Another aspect of astral projection involves the physical body itself. Its functions slow down measurably; the body temperature drops. To minimize problems, "Marsha" has developed the technique of "imaging" a blanket over the physical body while she is astral projecting. Just before returning, the body functions return to normal to allow for a smooth transition. Premature return has caused reported problems by various authors, and this could be due to the inability of the body functions to return to normal "in time". It may take a day or two for the astral and physical bodies to become reacclimated to each other in this situation.

In addition to protecting her physical self, she places a protective screen or bubble around her house to limit those who would try to hurt to try to scare her. "Marsha", like others I know, surrounds her own self with a mobile bubble shield when she's out of the total protection of her home. She occasionally must mentally mend this portable shield. The shields were necessitated in part because she was plagued by astral pranksters. They had learned how to astral travel but didn't know how to use this ability. She was and still is occasionally attacked on the astral level by the manic depressive described earlier because of his "tragedy" in life.

"Marsha" functions as a "limited guide" on an astral level, too. In many published reports by experts such as Dr. Kubler Ross and Dr. Raymond Moody as well as research conducted in the orient, guides are described by those who have "crossed-over" in transition. A personal friend shared his own experience. At this time, he "almost" died in a motorcycle accident. "Marsha" serves as a guide to those who have just passed into transition. But she can only go to a certain vibration or energy level. There, another "guide" takes over; she knows she can't continue and survive.

She has had other experiences with the dead. One striking case involved a relative in Sweden. She met his spirit over her house for about six days in a row. His concern was for the disposition of certain family heirlooms. She found out in the sixth day from relatives in Sweden that he had actually died the first day she had met him at her house.

Verification Is Difficult

The concluding concept is a very important one and is presented last as possibly an important conclusion. "Marsha" often attends "Council Meetings". But these meetings are not on the earth plane; they are on a much higher level of consciousness. There are no earth items present; the people wear cloaks and only their heads are visible. A large number of people attend Council—sometimes in a large circle, sometimes with a raised center section. At Council, each person critiques his own life's experiences—how well he's doing on his path—at that point in time. One reviews his own mistakes and makes suggestions for improvement. In "Council", sometimes a decision is made about whom is to be healed. She has had some verification of meeting entities earlier in Council. Occasionally she meets a face she remembers from Council and they both usually subtly search to find if the other has some remembrance. On several occasions, both indicated that it was in Council. Several members of the group present at the interviews agreed with the general details and acknowledged that they too had attended Council meetings. As indicated, the primary purpose of "Council" is for a personal review of one's own life—its mistakes, its progress and how it can be improved.

"Marsha's" sharings about her astral healing, other astral acitivities and Council Meetings provide important concepts for consideration. It's impossible to summarize each of these. You may agree with all or part or none of these concepts. During this unusual interview, we sought verification, but obviously this is very difficult. Data as furnished is provided for review. Certainly these concepts and their very broad implications should be carefully considered.

Ann Wigmore D.D.

Dear Doctor Ann

Ann Wigmore D.D. is a Doctor of Divinity who has devoted her life to the development of healthy minds and bodies.

Dear Dr. Ann: Please give me a list of some of the edible weeds. I know they are good for us to eat.—A.L.O.

Blessed One: Here are a few common ones. Many are a good source of chlorophyll. Juice plenty of plain grass with the other greens.

1. Wood Sorrel or Sour-grass is on the acid side but can be mixed with sprout juice.

2. Chickweed grows in cultivated fields as well as woods and grows very rapidly.

3. Dandelion is very rich in vitamin A. It will grow well indoors.

4. Fiddleheads are found in the woods. They can be transplanted and will grow generously in moist earth.

5. Watercress grows in brooks and springs. It's wonderful in salads. The ancient Persians used it for flavoring. Land cress can be grown indoors.

6. Purslane is one of the most popular weeds. It grows on sandy soil and can be grown indoors. Use the seed for cereal.

7. Acorns are not food for squirrels only. The American Indians used to bake them and eat them. Collect them for winter nut roasting. Plant sugar maples for spring maple syrup. Don't cook juice.

8. Jerusalem artichokes are shaped like sweet potatoes and are much easier to digest.

9. Lambs-quarters is an excellent weed. It is superior to spinach. The seed can also be used. They grow in your vegetable garden.

10. Wild Potato grows in dry soil. It has deep roots. Some weigh more than 20 pounds. They are a close relative to yams. They come up every year.

11. Mustard Leaves are good for seasoning in salad. The seeds can be dried and ground and used as a mustard plaster to aid sore muscles.

12. Chickory grows in waste places, at the sides of roads and has blue flowers. Use young leaves.

13. Milkweed grows like asparagus and its flowers are purplish and white. Every part is edible.

14. Pokeweed grows everywhere. It can be used for salad greens and for juicing. It makes an excellent drink.

15. Shepherd's-purse grows everywhere: gardens, lawns, waste places. The leaves and seeds are good for eating.

16. Cattail roots are a good substitute for potatoes.

There are many other wild plants or "weeds" which may be added to this list, such as comfrey, red clover, plaintain, and of course mint. Every garden should gladly welcome its edible weed friends.

Dear Doctor Ann: I have always thought grass was for the cows. Why do you think it's so good for people?—L.J.J.

My Dear One: I will tell you the story of what happened to me to make me recognize the value of grasses.

The experience, which led me to the discovery of the healing power of grass, was an automobile accident when I was 18 years old which shattered my legs above the ankles. Soon after the accident, gangrene set in and the doctors wanted to amputate, but I refused to sign the papers for the operation.

Following my final refusal to have my feet amputated just above the ankles, I found that people at the hospital seemed less friendly. Neither doctors or nurses came to my bedside and the next morning, early, I was loaded on a stretcher, having had no breakfast, taken downstairs to a waiting ambulance and whisked away to my father's house.

My homecoming was not a happy one. Neither my father nor my mother would come near me, and only with the help of my uncle would I find something for breakfast.

Before he left for his work in the factory each morning he would carry me out into the yard, where he deposited me on a long bench in the sunshine.

Luckily for me, the summer was warm, yet the sun was not too scorchingly hot. But I could not move and the pain was terrible.

I could not stand any covering on my diseased legs, so for hours I lay there, sometimes gazing down at the ring of greenish-blue which showed in the flesh just above the ankles, indicating plainly that the gangrenous organisms were slowly but surely increasing.

Perhaps this undisturbed quiet through the long days was good for me. A new faith seemed to well up from within, and while I watched the "creeping death"—as my uncle sorrowfully called it—inching up both legs, I felt I was not going to die.

I tried to eat everything green I could find. But my uncle refused to search for possible herbs. He was fearful of bringing me poisoned vetetation through ignorance. He did give me flowers which, after he would leave in the morning, I would consume ravenously.

Also, by reaching down beside the bench I was able to fill my stomach with ordinary grass, which my grandmother, who came from Lithuania, believed held every nutrient required for human health.

And so, through the long days, I was able to obtain the kind of food which my body seemed to need, that is, both fresh from the earth, and untreated with heat.

By having my uncle move the bench around the yard on my plea that the sun would reach me better, I was able to supply my body with fresh grass each day.

For several months I had a devoted friend, a little white puppy which gave me the affection I had missed from my family. This little dog was a regular visitor. He would sit by the hour, close to the bench, often looking up at me. This little animal allowed me to fondle and love him, but he never attempted to jump upon the lower end of the bench or in any manner approach the injured portion of my body.

One bright Sunday morning, a strange thing occurred...To my surprise, this white puppy climbed carefully onto the end of the bench, and reaching over my bare feet, began to lick the gangrenous wounds.

My first thought was for the animal's safety, I impulsively raised my arm to move it away, when the injunction of my grandmother came to mind so distinctly I could almost hear her voice: "Instinct-guided creatures, left to themselves, do not make mistakes."

So I lay back and let the puppy have its way and, strange as it may seem, I felt more comfortable. I tried, and I was able to lift myself to a sitting position, something I had not been able to do up till now.

I continued to improve, much to the surprise of the young physician who had attended me for the first time. My wounds turned pinkish, and although I could put no weight upon my legs, the pain had almost vanished.

With the young hospital surgeon was the "doctor with the gray whiskers," as my sister had called him. Together they inspected my legs. Finally, they contended together in low tones and told me they had decided to tell my father I was recovering. They called him from the house.

He listened impatiently, and the information seemed to infuriate him. He could not understand or accept that he was wrong in his decision to have my feet removed.

It was several months before the wounds were completely healed and I was able to get about on crutches my uncle provided. I was induced to return to the Middleboro Hospital for the doctors to see. They made no comment, merely shaking their heads as they inspected the X-ray films which showed that the bones had knitted firmly. All signs of gangrene had vanished.

My feet and legs became so strong I trained and ran in the Boston Marathon. I also would run through vacant lots and hillsides near my home in Boston in my bare feet, gathering weeds and grasses for my research experiments. I tested weeds and grasses from all over the world.

I decided that wheatgrass was the most powerful healer of all grasses. I based my findings on experiments using a kitten to taste the various grasses. In the final experiment, when I was ready to choose the best grass, the kitten munched on the grass in the flower pot containing wheatgrass.

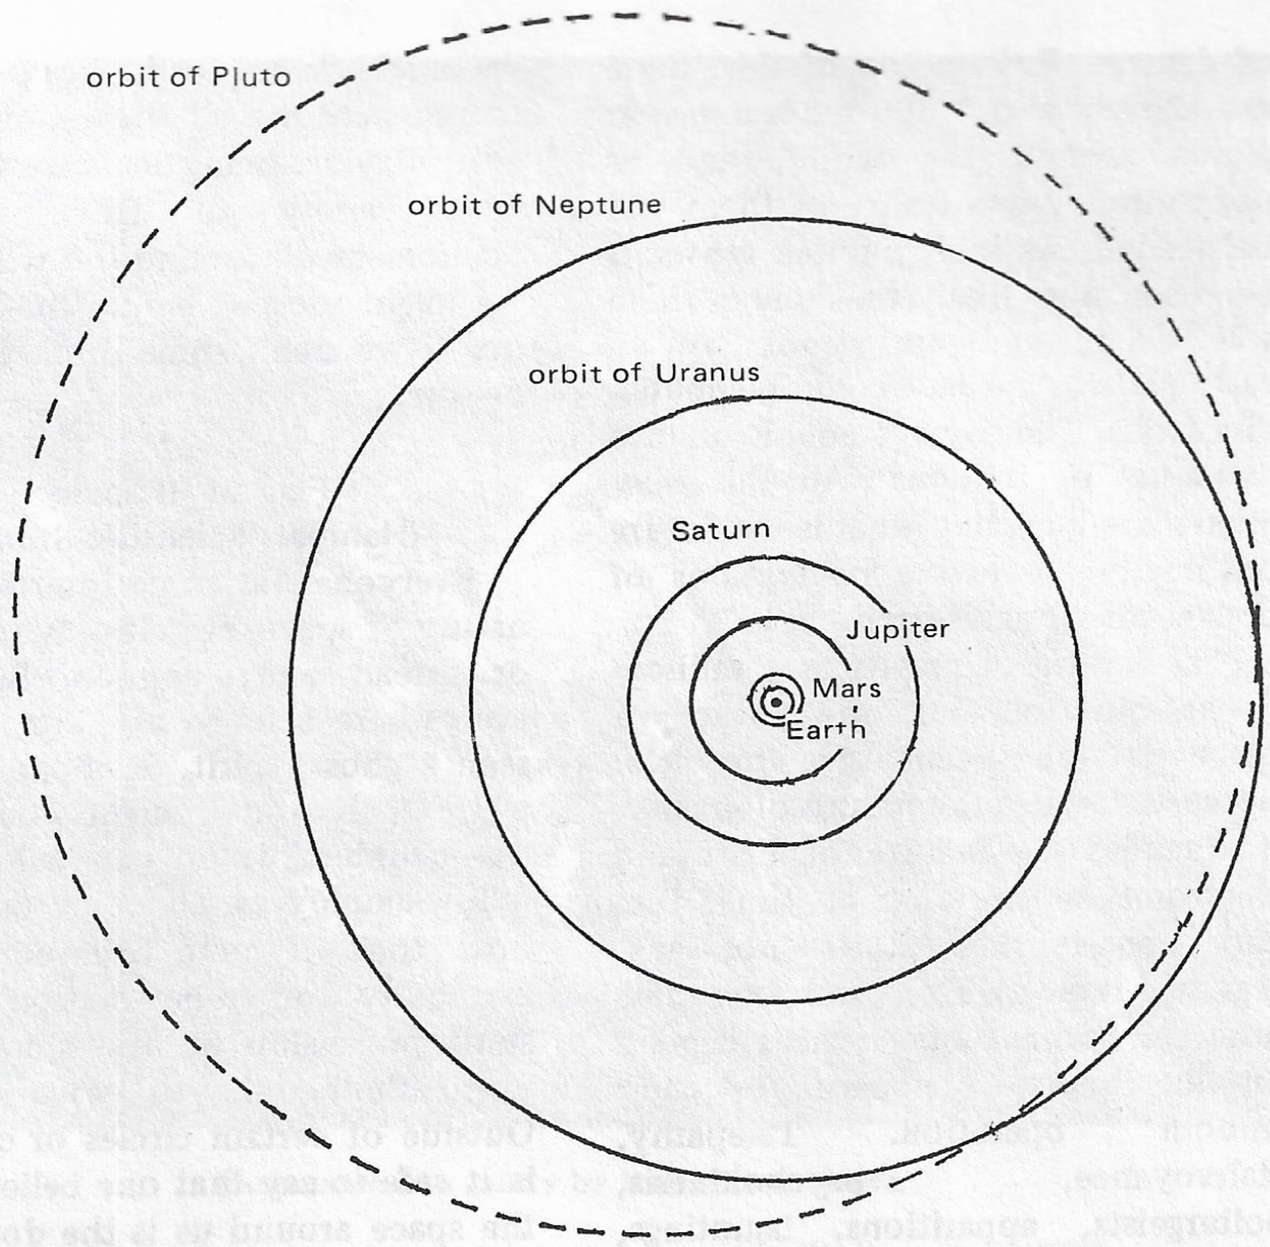
SPACE IS A TWO-WAY STREET

A THOUGHT PROVOKING TREATISE ON SPACE, GRAVITY and the INTERMEDIARY



by Walter Wiers

"The Goddess Arieune slackened the speed of her arrow-ship to suit that of Hoab's vessel. So, onward together they sped, propelled as a rocket is propelled, by constant emissions from the hulk. . .For as mortals find means to traverse the ocean and to raise a balloon, so do the Gods and spirits build and propel mightier vessels through the firmament, between the stars and over and under and beyond the sun.

"And when the ethereans send their ships coursing downward in the denser strata of a corporeal world, their ready workmen take in ballast and reverse the whirling screws to match the space and course of travel; for which purpose men learn the trade, having rank and grade according to proficiency. Many of them serving a thousand years' apprenticeship become so skilled in wielding the elements and in their knowledge of the decrees of density that thousands of millions of miles of roadways in heaven are as a well-learned book to them. And thus they are eagerly sought after, especially in emergency cases or on journeys of millions of years. For so well they know the requirements, the places of delight, the dangers of vortices and of eddies and whirlpools, that when a God saith: Take me hither or yonder, they know the nearest way and the power required. For as there are icebergs on the corporeal ocean dangerous to ships, and currents of trade winds and currents in the oceans, so are there in the etherean firmament currents and densities which the well-skilled can take advantage of, be it a slow trip of pleasure or a swift one on urgent business."

Condensed from Oahspe, 1882

Part I

Space is a two-way street.

Through an open door there can be traffic both ways. If "they" can come and go, so can we—eventually. That's the prospect.

Lately our increased understanding of space has given us the ability to communicate with men on the moon and with machines as far away as Mars, Venus, and Jupiter. When we know more about space we may be able to communicate with and perhaps visit other inhabited worlds, other "dimensions," just as, according to some, ships and beings from other worlds, other "dimensions," visit us, although not officially.

None dispute the quantity nor the universality of space. In our galaxy alone there is 10 billion trillion times more empty space than matter. For the universe as a whole, it's estimated that there's 10 million billion trillion times more space than stellar matter. A few zeros more or less wouldn't make much difference. So, even if one knew all there is to be known about matter—how it is made, combined, or converted into energy—one wouldn't have more than an understanding of an infinitesimal part of the universe.

On the other hand, space is basic to all. It's the one and only reality that is everywhere present, underlying all, containing all. And yet, because matter gets most of our attention, all our knowledge of space, too, is infinitesimal, especially our knowledge of its nature.

Is it possible we have our priorities reversed?

Needed: Spacework Qualifications: Intelligent and Open Minds

If quantity isn't the issue, nor our ignorance of matter, then the underlying issue must be the nature of so-called empty space. Is it really empty? Can space that is everywhere crisscrossed by light, radio, TV, and gravitational waves be mere empty nothingness? If waves aren't waves but particles, wouldn't space be full of particles? If "ether" can't be detected but "fields" can be measured, doesn't that prove there's something there—even if you mustn't call it "ether"? If space is mostly empty nothingness, how can it be "warped" or "curved" so as to produce gravitation? Is space at times disturbed by gravitational waves that trigger earthquakes?

This last question is growing in importance because in many ways quakes can be more destructive than formerly. In Tokyo, Mexico City, California, Peking, and other areas where quakes are fairly common and population is growing, millions now live or work in expensive high-rise buildings. In those areas the cause of earthquakes is already a million-dollar question. And the price is rising.

By itself an earthquake can do a lot of damage. But on top of this, there are already about 300 nuclear power plants around the world, and as population grows, more of them will be needed. As their number grows, it becomes more likely that one of them will be in an area struck by an earthquake. And that could be doubly disastrous. The damage could run into hundreds of millions. All this now makes the question, what is the nature of gravity, deserving of millions of dollars for more research.

The nature of gravity is a million-dollar question, but the nature of space is the all-inclusive problem. Because, besides the nature of gravity, it includes the nature of light and electromagnetism and of time, life, and consciousness. For not just gravity, radios, TVs, and countless other electromagnetic devices depend on the nature of space for their smooth operation. Telepathy, clairvoyance, psychokinesis, poltergeists, apparitions, hauntings, astrology, spirit survival, reincarnation, out-of-body travel, levitation, materializations, dematerializations, and a long list of UFO phenomena also depend on the nature of space.

UFO—One Key To The Mystery of Space?

Especially during the last 30 years the inhabitants of Earth have been deluged by UFO and psychic phenomena. Naturally, many see a connection between the two. They think UFO phenomena are for the most part the large-scale psi phenomena of some world(s) more advanced than ours, their putting psi powers to cosmic use, developing them for space gravel. Their purpose might be to show us what we ourselves could do if we investigated psi powers or UFOs for all it might be worth. An understanding of the one might provide us with the ability to duplicate the other.

A knowledge of electricity and magnetism has given us the power to do a wide range of things electronically. Atomic knowledge has given us nuclear power. Likewise if we knew more about "empty" space we might be able to "teleport" (dematerialize?) things and people, to make them vanish from one open or enclosed space only to reappear (rematerialize?) in another place or "dimension" or time. We might learn to "levitate" things or people. In time we might learn to duplicate and put to practical use all those powers that every day are being demonstrated by a wide variety of UFO and psi phenomena all around the world. And we might succeed before the Russians do. If we don't some think we might be sorry.

Fear of Ridicule Hampers Scientific Study

Everyone has some interest in the nature of space, even if only to defend or spread one's opinion. But, is it everywhere safe to say that one has seen a ghost, spirit, or apparition? Or a UFO? If you thought your house was haunted, would you tell all your fellow-employees about it and your boss too? If you believed in the possibility of reincarnation or of spirit possession or obsession, would you admit this to your doctor? Outside of certain circles or churches is it safe to say that one believes that the space around us is the domain of an invisible Devil, Satan, or God, with angels or demons battling for the souls of Earth's inhabitants? No smirks, smiles, nor snide remarks about one's mental health?

These are old yet new questions highly charged with emotions to which, with some indignation, most of the New Priesthood, Official Science, still gives mostly negative answers, often denying the facts. Much of the skepticism regarding strange occurrences isn't due to their novelty, for many of them are ancient enough. Millions reject the facts because to accept them would require a drastic revision of their long cherished religious beliefs or their notions of established science.

Nonetheless, every day UFO and psi facts are becoming more common. And their mountainous accumulation is making it harder and harder for us to ignore them or explain them away or to remain aloof from the issues they raise. We are compelled to face some of them. For of course the nature of space is basic to everything, including all our thinking, dreaming, science, religion, philosophy, and government.

Where should one begin one's research into this question?

Histories record that from ancient times men have argued over whether the space or air around them was at all times as plainly empty as during daytime it usually appeared to be. In ancient times just as today ghost stories could start an argument and so also could questions regarding the nature of light and gravity and the movements of the planets.

One of the first to put in writing his notion of the nature of space was Aristotle (384-322 B.C.). To denote the material of which the blue sky, upper atmosphere, or "heavens" were composed, he used the word aether. Later Descrates (1596-1650) and others used that word as the name for the basic, primitive, elementary, subtle type of matter, infinitely divisible, which they presumed filled the inter-planetary void.

Why the presumption that there must be an aether or ether filling interplanetary space? Is that assumption necessary?

The theories and newly discovered facts of the astronomers Copernicus, Tycho, Kepler, and Galileo raised many questions about planetary movements, gravity, light, and space. Among them were: Is the universe just a collection of loose objects floating in a vacuum with nothing connecting one thing with another? If the universe has no unity, wouldn't all of it—not just a part—be chaos? Other than gravitation, is there no universal glue? And how does gravitation work without a universal intermediary that transmits force from one body to another? How can bodies not in contact with each other, as two magnets or the moon and the Earth, exert an influence on each other? How can there be action at a distance if the line is down, the connection broken?

Descarter offered answers: Whatever is, is something. Space is. Therefore it's something. It's extension. All space is (or is filled with) something infinitely divisible and elastic, according to Descartes, which serves as that universal, indispensable intermediary for the transmission of force or pressure to objects at a distance.

The sun, according to Descartes, is the center of a vortex formed of that universal space-filler, the ether. The Earth's vortex and the vortices of the other planets, too, are sub-vortices of the sun's vortex. For which reason they all rotate in the same direction around the sun. As for gravity, things aren't pulled toward the Earth. They are driven toward the center of Earth by the power of its vortex.

Newton (1642-1727), too, at one time used the "aethereal medium" as a hypothetical cause for gravity. For as Newton made plain in his Principia (1687), there is no change in the motion of a body if no resultant force acts upon it. For a planet or a magnet to pull on another, something must pass from the one to the other—at least a force. You don't get something for nothing. If zero force or signal is transmitted, zero force or signal is received, and zero is the effect. Neither Newton nor anyone else could make it any clearer. As Newton himself put it, "That one body may act upon another at a distance through a vacuum, without the mediation of anything else. . .is to me so great an absurdity that I believe no man who has in philosophical matters a competent faculty for thinking, can ever fall into." (Italics mine—WW)

The Key To Many Mysteries

"Without the mediation of anything else"? Without some transfer from one body to another nothing happens? Today as in Newton's time, in the nature of that transfer, in the nature of that intermediary, whether called aether, ether, fields, flux, gradient, or curved spacetime, lies the key to an understanding of many mysteries. For, not just gravity but also light, magnetism, electrostatics, electromagnetism, and a long list of psychic phenomena involve action over seemingly empty distances. And today too, as in Newton's day, for our investigation of that intermediary, light is as universal and as everpresent as gravitation and a lot easier than gravity to produce and manipulate for testing theories by experiments.

In fact, beyond Earth and the moon, everything we know about the universe comes to us as visible light or invisible electromagnetic radiation. Ever since the ancient allegedly supernatural revelations were found to be unreliable, almost all our theories about stars, planetary movements, nebulae, red shifts, pulsars, quasars, black holes, and gravity have been based on our knowledge of the behavior of light and other electromagnetic radiation. Even to understand a little of the universe, we must have some direct knowledge of light's behavior. And this is true whether or not the Michelson-Morley experiment led to the wrong conclusion (according to some) that the speed of light in a vacuum is an absolute constant, which led to Einsteinian relativity, which, right or wrong, has become the basis for almost all modern theories of space, time, and gravity.

In 1675 the astronomer Roemer calculated the speed of light from observations of the eclipses of one of the moons of Jupiter. The figure he arrived at was far too low. Nonetheless he had asked a basic question and his method was O.K. if not his measurements.

Then in 1725 the astronomer Bradley discovered stellar aberration. He noticed that in positioning his telescopes, he always had to aim them with a certain lead-angle, as one would when shooting at a fast moving object, or as would be the case if the star were moving while Earth remained stationary. Or vice versa. All this raised questions regarding the speed of light relative to the moving Earth and solar system. More important, it raised questions regarding the absolute speed of all three, light, Earth, and the solar system, with respect to interplanetary ether or space, presumed to be stationary.

Relevant to this, in 1845 astronomer Stokes proposed: "I shall suppose that the earth and planets carry a portion of the ether along with them so that the ether close to their surfaces is at rest relatively to their surfaces while, as we recede from the surface, its (the ether's) velocity alters till, at no great distance, it is at rest in space." (Italics mine—WW)

Thus was born the "aether-drag" hypothesis that led to the ether "wind" hypothesis that Michelson, Morley, Miller, and others were to spend so many years of their lives putting to many painstaking tests.

First, Stokes presumed, as many did before him, that there is a universal intermediary for the transmission of light, for which he used the word ether. Second, he assumed or theorized, as did most of those who performed ether-test experiments, that at no great distance from the Earth, the ether is at rest, undisturbed and absolutely stationary, in fact practically synonymous with absolute space or "anchored" to it. If so, it could serve as a reference frame with respect to which we could measure the absolute motion of all objects and particularly the absolute speed of light.

For 200 years after Newton, the discovery of new facts in the behavior of light, especially interference and diffraction, favored the wave theory, which favored the ether theory. At the same time, however, facts were accumulating which made sense only by a particle theory. By 1880 so many seemingly contradictory facts had been accumulated that many doubted the existence of any ether. Optical theory—not gravity theory and experiment, which had stagnated since Galileo and Newton—was experiencing a crisis which later spread to most of physics.

Optical theorists, and of course some astronomers, and some who were on the verge of discovering electromagnetic waves (other than light), were all interested in testing the ether hypothesis.

Starting around 1880, Michelson, a professor of physics who had majored in optics, and Morley, a chemist who had some interest in astronomy and optics, theorized, as others also did, that as the Earth makes its annual trip around the sun, it must pass through the allegedly stationary ether. And, like a car going fast through calm air, Earth's motion around the sun (30 Kms per second) would cause an ether "wind" to blow across the Earth. It was theorized that light going with the "wind" would be speeded up, while light going against the "wind" would be slowed down. Thus, if some increase or decrease in the speed of light were observed, that would prove there is an ether wind, which would prove the existence of the ether. Likewise most physicists believed then as most of them do today: that if Michelson and Morley (two very competent scientists) failed to detect any ether wind (they failed), that proves there is no ether because there is no ether wind!

"They" Assumed

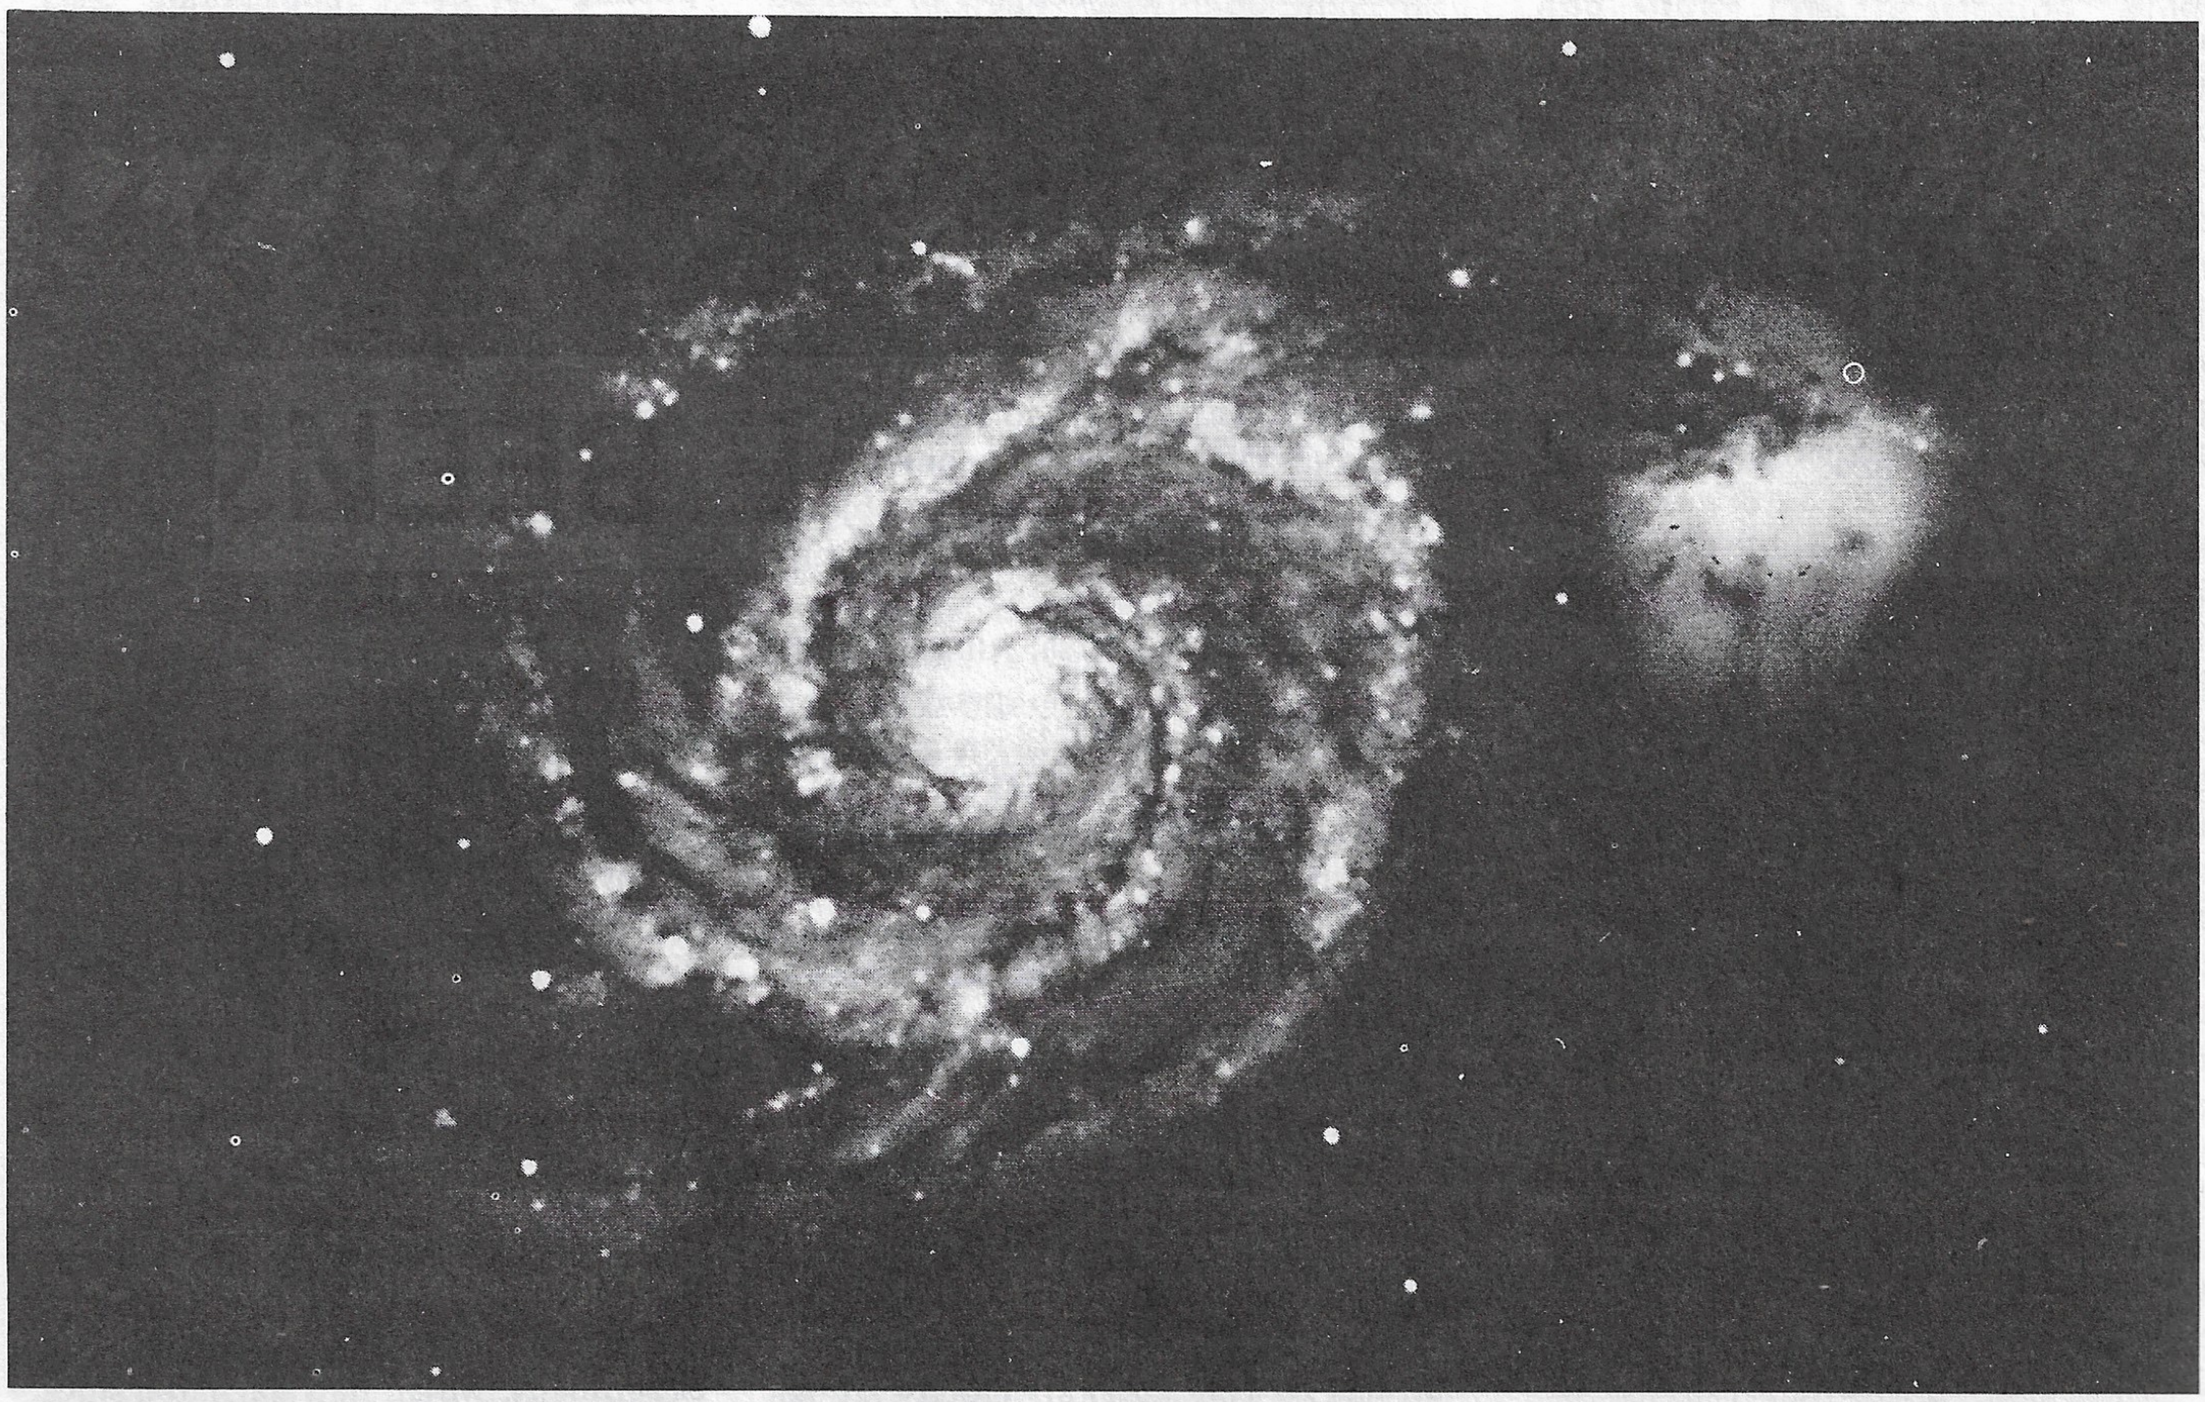
Was the assumption that the intermediary (the ether) is stationary in outer space a wrong assumption? From the start did that assumption doom the experimenters to disappointment?

Because, assuming there is an ether, then perhaps, as stated in the quotation from Oahspe with which this article begins, it is subject to unseen currents and eddies, like the oceans and air of Earth. For just as a tornado or strong wind can carry heavy objects, and as a whirlwind gathers up dust and drives it to a center, so might a whirlwind of ether or "gravitons" (as some would prefer to call it) gather up the scattered atomic parts floating in space and, driving them toward a center, form nebulae, stars, and solar systems like our own. Conceivably our own sun may be the center of an ancient whirlpool or vortex as first suggested by Descartes and later expanded upon in Oahspe. That theory is suggested, too, by the fact that every one of the planets of our sun revolve around it in the same direction and nearly in the same plane, as shown in many astronomy texts:

Likewise the spiral nebulae, that with the improvement of telescopes are every year photographed in greater numbers and with greater clarity, suggest the existence in space of great whirlpools or vortices, don't they?

For which reasons you may find it worthwhile to reconsider the vortex theory, stated thusly in Oahspe: "The earth floats in the midst of a vortex... Things are driven toward the center of the vortex by the power of the vortex... The same principles apply to all the stars, suns, planets, and moons..."

It's all ancient theory, not new to astronomers nor popular with them. Nonetheless, perhaps there are some not-too-difficult experiments that can be done right here on Earth and that, even if they don't "prove" the vortex theory, may in other ways be enlightening? A description of those experiments, however, must be left for Part Three of this series.



Notice how the smaller of these two galaxies seems to be at the end of an arm of the other. A stream of stars connects them. (Hale Observatories photograph)

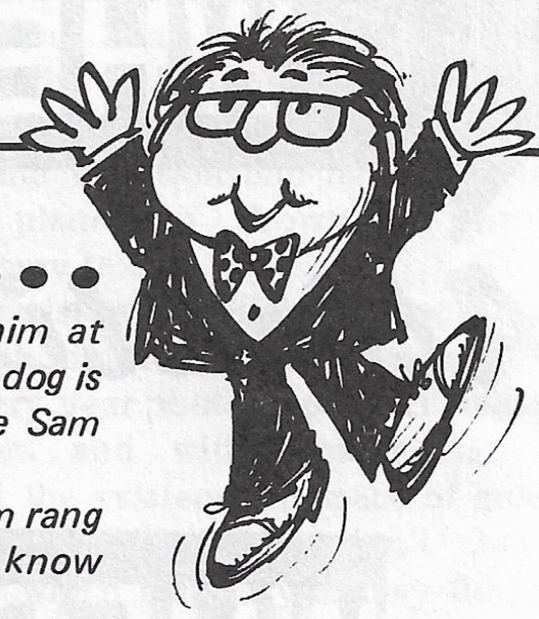
SAM SAYS...



Sam was furious when the phone woke him at 2 a.m. It was his neighbor complaining, "Your dog is barking so loudly I can't sleep." Then, before Sam could reply, the caller hung up.

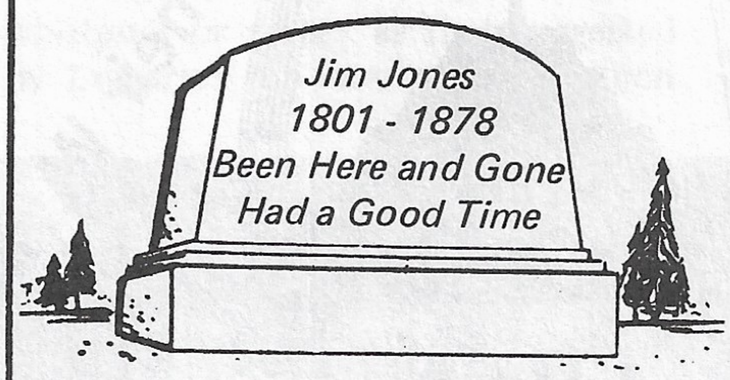
The following morning at exactly 2 a.m., Sam rang up his neighbor and said, "I just wanted you to know that I don't have a dog."

Some students at the University report that the other morning one of the professors said: "I shall not illustrate what I have in mind."

Then he erased the blackboard!

—The college football star was having trouble scoring. "Brattleboro," yelled the coach, "yer outa condition. Whatcha been doin'? Studyin' again?"

—And then there was the quarterback who was having a good season, but wasn't happy because his girl was faithful to the end.



TEEN AGE PARTY

Oh, my worldly high school son. . .
He makes it so very clear
We parents only spoil the fun,
Dad and I must disappear.
The fray is for the kids to run—
Until refreshment time is near.
They don't want me bright and witty.
They want me on the food committee.
Mom

Grandpa had a bit of counsel for Sam: "If anyone has good advice to pass on to their kids, they should give it to them while they're still young enough to think you know what you are talking about."

A man taking a survey stopped at the Sampson's one evening.

"Do you feel that big government is the cause of all your problems?" was one question he asked.

"Well . . . ," started Sam.

"Some he blames on me," said Fran brightly.

LONG RANGE WEATHER PREDICTION

It occurs to us that the wooly worm is wearing a blond coat this fall and the black bands around the wooly worm are rather narrow or missing entirely. We must also realize the cornhusks are not so tight around the ear corn that they are split but are easy to unfold. As anyone of experience in such things knows instantly from these minute observations, we shall have a mild winter, more or less. If you believe that, good luck.

HEALING PRAYERS

Dear Mr. Overlee: I am a minister to a small congregation but thus far our prayers have not been able to help my wife. Perhaps through your efforts as shown in SEARCH, she can be relieved.

Nellie is afflicted with a general arthritis which is very painful; also has a complete hearing loss in one ear, and a high loss in the other, diagnosed as dead nerves. Along with this she has severe head noises, which are so bad she can hardly bear them.

Any help you may be able to get for her, through your contacts will certainly be appreciated by the family. Please help.

May God add His blessing to your work.—F.L.

ANSWER: Healing prayers have begun, and shall be on two more occasions.—H. Drummond.

AN IMPORTANT JOURNEY

Dear Vern Overlee: Saw your name and address in a SEARCH magazine. You gave answers through automatic writing. Could you tell me this what concerns me very deeply.

I lost a person (he passed on). I feel like I sort of kept him from re-reaching the bed, so he sunk on the floor. It all went so fast.

I study all the ways I know how to be a blessing for all. But I am so alone, it was 22½ years I knew Donald. Is there any word from the spirit side? I sing Beautiful Dreamer, the song Donald liked. Any reply you give I shall cherish forever.—Z.B.

Answer: You perhaps could have helped the man to his bed but he was on a journey far more important than the last few steps, for he was going home and he is home now. One day you shall join him and share with him again. He is drawn back to you when you sing his song for it is yours and his.—H. Drummond.

PROPER FOOD WILL CURE

Mr. Overlee: I read about you in SEARCH magazine and would like to ask the spirits concerning my health.

I have what the doctors call Amlyaidasic and they say they do not know what causes it and that there is no known cure. It is a kidney disease. It causes me to pass protein through urine and the amlyaids are deposited in cavities of my body causing me to be swelled. The doctors have me on Lasix to help expel the fluid, and also put me on 2000 mg salt free diet.

What comments do the spirits have concerning a possible cure for me? Thank you.—W.C.

Answer: When you eat what was intended you to eat your problem shall be no more. With such a problem there is no other solution nor workable cure. There is that lacking in your system that must be replenished. One day you shall know what it is for this night the spirit forces shall come to you administering what relief they can bring.—H. Drummond.

SPEAKING IN TONGUES

Question: What is speaking in tongues?

Answer: With those who speak in tongues, we find spirits of one long gone who expresses through one who is in a trance state, brought about through a heightened religious ecstasy. This entity speaks in the language he or she used while in the physical body. Languages unheard today often come through, as life has been and always shall be in one form or another; in one world or another; in one planet or another; in one sphere or another; in one continent or another. Life has been—continents have come and gone, but life continues. Races, languages, environments change, but life is constant and so what is not understood is indeed an expression from a mind which continues forever.

This "Beautiful World of Spirit" series features your questions with answers from a group of spirits whose words come through automatic writing. Send in your inquiries to SEARCH Magazine, Amherst, Wisconsin 54406.

INNOCENT—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-37-7
(Paper, 8½ x 11, 172 pages)
A tale of love—the love of an innocent girl in whose imagination there was much of fancy; but when she faced "his fact", her love was subjected to a bitter test.

JOURNEY TO THE EARTH'S INTERIOR, A—Marshall B. Gardner—$7.50 +.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-48-2
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 456 pages, 12 illustrations, index, large type)
Gardner has "marshalled" an incredible number of factual observations culled from research stemming from the polar explorations of many explorers, including Peary, Sir John Franklin, Lieutenant McClintock, Dr. Kane, Dr. I.I. Hayes, Sir John Ross, Greeley, Adolf Nordenskiold, Nansen, Admiral Melville, Captain Cook, Edwin S. Grew and literally dozens of the best minds of his day who did research on these intrepid explorers whose work raises so many questions as to the actual shape of the Earth. Is it really hollow, and can we ever prove or disprove it? Read the facts about these questions for yourself!

LAST BATTLE FOR EARTH—Walter Wiers—$6.00 + .70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-54-7
(Paper, 5½ x 8½, 430 pages)

(Cloth, 7 x 9¼, 422 pages, illustrated)
The first book on space law, by a distinguished international lawyer. Vital to anyone interested in the future of the space age. Is that future to be war over who owns the moon—or peaceful and lawful development for all?

MAN AND THE CYCLE OF PROPHECY—Lee Nero—$4.95+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-50-4
(Paper, 6 x 9, 216 pages)
The origin of man has been the subject of much research and investigation. But man remains an enigma! His past is hazy, his present is confusion, and his future is doubtful. Is the puzzle unsolveable? Can man understand man? He must learn to think for himself, he must understand his cyclic environment. This book is an attempt to describe these cycles and to provide food for thought; to point the way out of the maze of false teachings that entrap us today.

(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 256 pages, index, large type)
Glimpses of the supernatural. It took the Rev. Lee twenty years to gather the material in this book, and throughout he dealt only with facts and records, rather than with theories. His are historical narrations, all of it personally gained by investigation, researched and documented.

PARADISE ISLAND—Lester C. Evans—$2.50+.70 postage & handling — ISBN 0-910122-12-1
(Paper, 5½ x 8½, 192 pages)
What if you were one of five men and four women marooned for life on a strange lost "Garden of Eden" by an airplane crash? Would five "Adams" and four "Eves" make this modern Eden a Paradise? Could they begin a beautiful new existence, or would they make the same mistakes all over again? Can man really control his animal instincts? Is sex really evil, and is "sin" inevitable?

PHILOSOPHY OF MAGIC, THE—Eusebe Salverte—$4.75+.90 postage & handling — ISBN 0-910122-41-5
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 304 pages, large type)
The occult sciences of ancient peoples. Hundreds of ancient "lost" sciences are covered in this book; from miracles, prodigies, divine intervention, fables accepted as facts, thaumaturgists, genii, oracles, ledgerdemain, mystery schools, the Magi, automata, the art of flying, androids or speaking heads, apparitions, perpetual lamps to initiations, religious rites and immunity against serpents.

REVELATION OF ST. JOHN, THE—A.J. Inger—$2.61+.70 postage & handling — ISBN 0-910122-40-7
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 208 pages)
A psychic translation by the famed medium, written in 1908, but incredible in its prophetic accuracy of the national situation today, especially startling concerning the politics of Watergate. Even more startling, the predictions of our immediate future!

ROMANCE OF TWO WORLDS, A—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.70 postage & handling — ISBN 0-910122-03-2
(Paper, 6½ x 9½, 252 pages)
Marie Corelli was perhaps the greatest psychic writer of them all. In this novel she treats the world of the spirit, and its relationship to we who are in the world of the living.

SECRET POWER, THE—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.70 postage & handling — ISBN 0-910122-07-5
(Paper, 5¼ x 8, 221 pages)
A great book of "secret knowledge". The most amazing book of prophecy of the past century! The atom bomb predicted half a century ago. (Here is an actual quote.) "Radio-activity is an explosion of great violence, the energy exerted is millions of times more powerful than the highest explosive substance yet made in our laboratories; one bomb loaded with such energy would be equal to millions of bombs of the same size and energy as used in the trenches. One's mind stands aghast at the thought of what could be possible if such power were used for destructive purposes; a single aeroplane could carry sufficient to annihilate a whole army, or lay the biggest city in ruins with the death of all its inhabitants."

SECRET WORLD,THE—Ray Palmer & Richard S. Shaver—$8.50+1.15 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-39-3
(Clothbound, washable cover, 8¾ x 11¼, 144 pages, 69 full color plates, 112 black and white illustrations)
What is the great secret of this planet? Is there really a super plan to our existence? What part do we play in it? What do we know of the secret already! Who are we? What is reality? Do we control our own destiny? Can we create our future? Where is the spirit world? Is Earth really hollow? What is Earth's true history? Did man once live in the sea? Did ancient races come from the moon, Mars, Venus, from outer space? Are some stones really electronically recorded crystal records of an ancient super race? Did the moon ever strike the Earth? The strangest and most fascinating book you will ever read!

SENSE OF SLAVERY, A—Phil Hruskocy—$5.00 postpaid ISBN 0-910122-51-2
(Paper, 5½ x 8½, 160 pages)
What is the power of the future that enslaves the gentle, the innocent, the aged and the unborn minds of men? Will we be faced with a world government people seem powerless to resist? This book is about a future shaped by our present.

SMOKY GOD, THE—Willis George Emerson—$3.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-20-2
(Paper, 5¼ x 8¼, 176 pages, illustrated—11 full-color paintings and 2 black and white)
Olaf Jansen, a fisherman from Sweden, and his son, sailed by accident through the north polar opening and into the hollow interior of the Earth, and lived two years among its people. Olaf Jansen claims this is his true story as told to Willis George Emerson. He tells of a race of super giants, fifteen feet tall, far advanced scientifically, who treated them with utmost kindness. He lived in peace and harmony and traveled all over their country. He returned through the south polar opening. Fascinating reading, with pictures, charts, maps.

SO YOU'RE GOING TO HEAVEN?—M.R. Keith—$3.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-22-9
(Paper, 5½ x 8½, 262 pages)
There is no single topic concerning which there is more misconception than the Hereafter. There is a lot of evidence concerning the after-death life of man, and what may be found there. The second book by this author on the subject of Heaven.

SORROWS OF SATAN,THE—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-06-7
(Paper, 6½ x 9½, 264 pages)
Perhaps the most unusual in its "mystic" content of all Marie Corelli's philosophical novels.

SOUL OF LILITH, THE—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-05-9
(Paper, 6½ x 9½, 324 pages)
In this book the author shows how close is the link between life before death and life after death.

TEMPORAL POWER—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-26-1
(Paper, 8½ x 11, 258 pages)
A tremendous tale of a King and his two passions—for the woman he loved and for power. Both came to a tragic end, but both reached into a mystic realm that brought a strange denouement.

THIRTY YEARS AMONG THE DEAD—Dr. Carl A. Wickland—$1.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-08-3
(Paper, 95 pages, illustrated)
This is a condensed version of Dr. Wickland's classic book on abnormal psychology. It is a record of his work with obsession carried on with Mrs. Wickland, who was an accomplished medium. Together they cured many obsessed persons, persuading discarnate entities to give up their hold on their victims, and thus restored their patients to normal happy lives.

(Paper, 5½ x 8½, 266 pages, photographs)
The author, once a skeptic, is today a confirmed believer in UFOs. His earnest research into the identity, aims and purposes of thinking intelligences that frequently come into our atmosphere from other worlds and dimensions of existence, makes compelling reading.

VEIL LIFTED, THE—J. Traill Taylor—$3.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-42-3
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 160 pages, 12 illustrations, large type)
The best book ever written on spirit photography. The book contains twelve famous spirit photographs plus a paper by J. Traill Taylor describing experiments in psychic photography, plus other material by Rev. H.R. Haweis and James Robertson.

VENDETTA—Marie Corelli—$3.50+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-27-X
(Paper, 8½ x 11, 192 pages)
A tale of a vendetta toward a vengeance so terrible that even the dead recoil from its horror. Yet, a tale of justice and retribution as it must come to all those who challenge the right.

WONDERS OF THE INVISIBLE WORLD, THE—Cotton Mather—$4.75+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-46-6
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 304 pages, large type)
The trials of the witches. Cotton Mather's own account of his famous persecution of the witches of Salem, written in 1693. The self-incrimination of the most sadistic member of the clergy who ever lived; fascinating and incredibly blood-chilling. The accusations, the trials, the executions.

HERE'S MY GIFT LIST

1. TOM—My buddy. He doesn't believe in all "that stuff"—but still—He's a thinker. We've had many midnight talk sessions about all the SEARCH subjects. He might not admit it, but I KNOW he'd like SEARCH Magazine.

2. MY GRANDMA—She's had "just a feeling" and "Hunches" all her life. I'll bet she'd really enjoy SEARCH, once she read it.

3. UNCLE PAUL—Sort of my favorite uncle. He insists that he (and a lot of other pilots) heard terrific music in the skies while on those dangerous aerial missions in WWII. He wouldn't mention it to most people—but it's something he KNOWS was really there and he still wonders to himself about it. I really think SEARCH would open up new vistas for him.

I could go on, but I've left the other side for you to write down your list.

WHERE THE READER HAS HIS SAY. . .

CAN YOU DROWN A SPIRIT?

Dear Mrs. Palmer:

Spiritualists have been asked the following many times.

Why does not a deceased husband, who has had an extremely close relationship with his surviving wife, invariably contact her from the spirit world? If their love for each other has been so intense, he must surely know of her continuing grief. Therefore, in all logic, would he not want to assure her of a vital fact? That with her own passing they will eventually be reunited?

No matter how difficult the contact may be, he would stubbornly make it succeed. But only an infinitisimal number of such cases are seemingly successful. Why? If, let us say, contact is NOT difficult, why the puzzling silence from the Other Side?

To answer this question, let us make an analogy. Let us invent a married family of three—Alfred and Florence Sweeney and their eight year old son, Bobby.

Here is a marriage that is anything but compatible. Arguments occur almost daily. And how bitter they are, with hysterical shoutings, cruel insults, shameful sarcasm, senseless accusations, etc. Thankfully, however, there is at least no bodily violence on any of the three.

The result of Bobby being subject to all this since his first awareness left its mark. Unsurprisingly, he is not well-adjusted or stable, but very nervous. Tense. Sleeps badly. Rarely smiles. And, far too often, he is close to crying.

As vacation time approaches, the parents decide to spend their three weeks in California. Of course Disneyland will be visited right off. So, when the time comes, the family leaves their home in Buffalo, New York. With Alfred driving the car, it takes less than fifteen minutes for an eruption. The adults are at it again. The swelling arguments and heated words outdrown the car radio. Young Bobby in the back seat cringes. His heart races and he fights back the tears.

And so it goes. The bickering rarely abates during the three-day drive to California, with night stop-overs in highway motels.

Finally they reach their reserved hotel in California just as the sky darkens. They register and settle into their rooms. Supper in the dining lounge is eaten in sullen silence. Then, exhausted, they retire for the night. Early the next morning, as planned, they will drive to Disneyland.

Breakfast on the following day is again eaten glumly. No words spoken. The lump in Bobby's throat makes it hard to swallow.

Once in the car, Alfred drives the others to Disneyland and, after parking, the three walk toward the center of activity. Throngs of people are doing the same with eager anticipation.

Someone—either Alfred or Florence—makes an insulting remark to the other and an argument ensues. Florence holds Bobby's hand but is not aware of it.

Again, the youngster feels himself tense up. Nervousness almost brings on nausea. His eyes moisten with tears.

On they walk. They have about a hundred yards to go before rounding a bend that will reveal Disneyland in all its sparkling, ethereal glory.

Now Bobby becomes aware of distant, heady music. Laughter. The subdued noises of exciting amusements. The back of one hand dries his tears and he perks up.

Then—he and his parents round the bend. And there, not far ahead, is the fabled Disneyland!

Instantly, Bobby is spellbound by all the dazzling sights and sounds and movements before him. He walks open-mouthed and wide-eyed amid the magnificent structures, the spectacular rides, all entrancingly colored. And the smell of food is mouth-watering.

Though his parents continue to argue at his side, they are unnoticed, completely forgotten. Just as well could they be on another planet.

Now back to the nagging question asked earlier.

If a dead husband's love for his surviving wife is so genuinely deep, why does he not contact her with little delay even though, presumably, there is no difficulty performing the act?

A likely and reasonable answer could be that, just as Bobby lost all awareness of the world of his parents when he entered the new "world" of Disneyland, so, too, could a mortal (the majority at any rate) forget the physical plane when, upon death, he enters the spiritual world. If his forgetfulness is not total, then it could be pushed far back in his mind. This because of the greater reality of his new "home", greater because here there is an absence of so many former disturbing and worrisome things such as a polluted environment, famines, unemployment, the callousness of most people, the terrifying threat of nuclear war wipe-out, etc., etc.

Here, in the spirit world, they feel more joyously "alive" than they ever did on the earth plane, and anticipate with great excitement the wonders that unquestionably lie ahead.

As I type this letter, it is August 15, 1979, and I am very much aware that on this date, two years ago, Ray Palmer died. I still miss him enormously, Mrs. Palmer. I miss his marvelous, oft-enlightening editorials and his memorable answers to his readers' letters. And not infrequently were those answers joltingly fresh, intelligent, well-thought-out. How I marvelled at his incredible insight and equally incredible deductive powers. I wonder, for example, how he would have answered the following:

Ray held to the belief that a spirit body is just as SOLID, in every way, as it had been as a mortal on the earth plane. He believed that the spirit body uses its lungs to breathe. That it has blood (or its equivalent) flowing through its veins, along with a beating heart and a pulse-rate. The thought of spirits being nebulous and insubstantial would have had Ray wincing, and then energetically shaking his head.

He believed, furthermore, that the spirit world was similar to ours in many ways, having PHYSICAL mountains, trees, rivers, oceans, etc. Okay. Now, let us picture two spirits wading in a river. They walk further outward until the water reaches their chests.

Suddenly one of the spirits—the stronger one—performs an incomprehensible act. It grabs its unwary companion and, with little effort, holds its head under water. What would happen then? Would the thrashing victim begin breathing water—and drown? Drown? But how could it when it is already dead?

Yes, Mrs. Palmer, as always, a Ray Palmer answer would have been fascinating to read. Sorrowfully, this cannot be done.

Sincerely,

Alex Saunders

● Can you drown a spirit? If Ray were to answer, I think he would say "yes". What about references to "wars in heaven" in mythology, in Oahspe, and even the bible, as we understand, wars are for killing. If a living person can die, and yet still live, why cannot a spirit die and yet live? Perhaps to die means simply to change. It is so difficult to understand what death means, when most of us have scarcely learned what life is.—marjorie

"THEY SHALL GO ABROAD IN MY FIRMAMENT"

I would like to comment in regard to Mr. Charles E. Toland's question in his letter in Back Talk in the Spring issue of Search. He asks why the Bible or Oahspe does not prophecy the moon landing. I am sure others have caught this, but doesn't the Oahspe prophecy, "That I may stir man up to rise and enjoy the things I have made. For they shall go abroad in my firmament and behold my glorious marks", cover this question as given by Mr. Walter Wiers in the article, Ships of Light? Just where these verses are in Oahspe is not given. I myself would like to know and am sure others would like to know also. Hope someone will give the information where they can be found.

Sincerely,

CHRISTOLOGY

George W. Van Tassel was also our friend for the past 20 years. We loved him too. Because we know that you, and all the other 6,000 members of his Ministry of Universal Wisdom, Inc. and of his College of Universal Wisdom (a part of the ministry), also loved him too, we have taken it upon ourselves to notify all of you around the world that on April 20, 1979, the members of the Board of Directors of the Ministry and of the college voted to dissolve both the Ministry, and also the College too. And also to distribute (contribute) any/and/all of the ministry's, and also the college's properties and assets to the International Church of Christology Corporation (a California non-profit religious organization).

UFO NEWSCLIPPING SERVICE

Want to keep up with the real "close encounters?" One excellent way of doing so is with the UFO Newsclipping Service, bringing you UFO reports from the United States and around the world. Since 1969, our Service has obtained newsclippings from an international press clipping bureau, then reproduced them by photo-offset printing for our subscribers. Many fascinating UFO reports (photographs, landing and occupant cases, etc.) are only published in smaller daily and weekly newspapers. Our Service provides these for you, along with wire-service items from Associated Press, United Press International, Reuters and other agencies.

Each monthly issue of the UFO Newsclipping Service is a 20-page report containing the latest UFO accounts from the U.S., England, Canada, Australia, South America and other countires. English tranlations of foreign language reports are also provided.

Let us keep you informed on world-wide UFO activity. For subscription information and sample pages from our Service issues, write today to:

THEY SPRANG FROM A HOLE IN THE EARTH

Dear Friend,

I do possess the book, The Walam Olum, about the Delaware Indians, which was published by the Indiana Historical Society in 1954. It includes all the pictographs in the original Indian production. There are also a map or two of the suspected migration route of the Algonquian peoples to the eastern coast. It is suggested the Salishan and Wakashen branches broke away somewhere near the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains in the vicinity of the headwaters of the Athabaska River. The authors take the pictographs step by step through the migration legend, giving their interpretations to each. The Walam Olum is also a recount of the historical chiefs as remembered, beginning with Wapalanewa (Bald Eagle) and Waptumwi (White Wolf). Presumably these chiefs represented the founding of the Fowl (Turkey) and Quadruped (Wolf) divisions of the tirbe. The Walam Olum would seemingly indicate a long migration from the distant northwest.

As you presumably know, it was Trowbridge, who in 1823 talked to Captain Pipe (a descendant of the more famous Pipe of Revolutionary days) and learned of the creation legend connected to both the Minsis and the Wyandots. The latter, claimed to be the ancestors of the Minsis—a strange belief except for the fact the Wyandots had succored the dispossessed Delawares in the post Revolutionary period—claimed they sprang from a hole in the earth—"still to be seen (in 1823)"—on Lake Huron. They climbed out of this hole to the world above—our present earth. According to tradition, the Lenni Lenape originated with the virgin birth of twins to one of the Wyandot women. This tradition is now heavily influenced by the Iroquois with the belief the world rests upon the back of a turtle who eternally floats in a great sea. When this turtle quivers, there are earthquakes. It is difficult to assess how much of this tradition is originally Minsi and how much is an Iroquois overlay.

The Minsis were not alone in their belief of emergence from an underworld. The Kiowas, a plains tribe long associated with Oklahoma, believed they came into this world from below through a hollow log. They claimed a pregnant woman got caught in the log and thereby prevented the escape of the majority behind her. This is why the Kiowas were so few in numbers, they explain. It also explains their tribal name Kwuda, which means "coming out."

Other tribes also speak of an underworld origin. Among these is the Hopitu (Hopi) of modern Arizona. They believe the entrance to this Underworld is in the depths of the Grand Canyon and is called Sipapu. In all their kivas there was always an emblematic "sipapu".

While the tribe is today uncertain, it may have been the Manso, Suma, or Jumano who became convinced the enormous Carlsbad Caverns were the entrance to the underworld.

Even more fascinating because of their remoteness in distance and time, the Creek (Muskogee) Indians, now of Oklahoma but formerly of Alabama and Georgia, believed they sprang from a crater in the earth along the eastern side of the Rockies, which they, like the Blackfeet, called the "Backbone of the World".

There is a similar origin tale among the Choctaws of Mississippi, who state they originated at the great sacred mound of Nanih Waya in Winston County. They claim they issued forth into this world from a hole in the center of the mound and arranged themselves outside of this mound after their issuance "to dry off."

Interestingly, the Choctaws are supposedly responsible for the name of the Cherokees. It presumably is the corruption of the Choctaw word choluk or chiluk, meaning "Pit" or "Cave". There are many caves throughout the Cherokee country. While this name may apply to the fact the Cherokees anciently lived in caves, it may also be connected with their "issuing from caves" in some origin sense.

There were doubtless many other tribes with similar origin legends. They are too many to ignore and probably have a common origin. This may be the reason the Indian so fondly calls this world his Earth Mother and why he is so careful not to desecrate her surface. It also explains his conviction he was born of this Earth Mother and upon death is returned to her with his body in a fetal position.

I neglected to add before the previous paragraph that the local Chumash Indians—now nearly extinct—had a number of traditions about underworld towns, entered by land through caves and in the sea by special spiritual powers. This, of course, leads me to state these Indian traditions dealt with what we call the spiritual world and the Above People related to it. There is a compromising of principle here because the Indians were convinced these two worlds existed side by side and contemporaneously. This attitude seemed to have been universal.

I feel these native peoples had a philosophy of the world which could stand up well today. They knew much of nature and had ancient wisdoms which came from the remote past. Today the scientists concede they cannot explain the origin of the universe or whether there were previous universes. This troubles them because it seems to imply the hand of a Creator.

Sincerely,
D. Bedford

ALTERNATIVE 3

Dear Mrs. Palmer:

In the Spring, 1979, issue of your Search magazine, you wrote an article about a book, banned in the United States: Alternative 3 by Leslie Watkins. You also wrote: "We hope some of you will attempt to purchase a copy of Alternative 3. And we'd be very interested to hear your story."

I listen to talk shows on the radio in the evening. One evening a woman called WDBO in Orlando, Fla. and asked the Host if he had read Alternative 3. He said, "No". She said her friend ran a book store and one day handed her a copy and said "here, read this, I think you'll like it." Offered to send the host a copy. He hasn't mentioned the book again.

I went to a book store on Okeechobee, Florida, and asked if they had Alternative 3 by Leslie Watkins. She said, "no". She called her supplier in Miami. He had it and she ordered 3 copies. I got a copy of Alternative 3 for $1.88 on July 19. It is published by Avon Books, a division of the Hearst Corp., 959 Eighty Ave., New York, N.Y., 10019. Book version copyright 1978 by Leslie Watkins. Library of Congress Catalogue Card No. 79-64272. First Avon printing, June 1979. Printed in the U.S.A. So the book is not banned in the U.S.A.

However, pages 164-5 of the book, quotes Kenneth Hughes in the Daily Mirror, on June 20, 1977, in an article headlined: WHAT ON EARTH IS GOING ON?—Alternative 3 (ITV 9.0) is an investigation into the disappearance of several scientists. They simply seem to have vanished from the face of the earth. The program will be screened in several other countries—but not America. The author of the book added the documentary was banned in two countries—America and Russia: the two principal partners in Alternative 3. A footnote on the last page: *the category under which this book was published in Great Britain was listed as world affairs/speculation.

A week ago, I heard a book review on WIOD, Miami, on the Sandy Peyton Show. The book was "SOMEBODY ELSE IS ON THE MOON" debunked in Search, Winter 1977, Issue 133, by James Oberg.

Both books quote communications between NASA and our astronauts who landed on the moon. They claim that other messages and parts that were heard on T.V. were in code. Some tapes of the messages had to be run through a de-coder to understand them.

You have had many articles in your publications telling of similar happenings that are in these books. Ray worte several times about brain operations for behavior control and how quickly it can be done.

These books could be true. We don't want to believe that these things happen in the greatest country on earth. The U.S.A. We do have factions in this country who want to see control of the people and a one world government. We are losing our freedoms. The control of energy (gasoline) will keep the people in the sections of the country where they live, just as was described in Forum, Nov. 1975, Vol. 10, No. 134: THE INTERNAL CAPTURE OF THE UNITED STATES. Our people have become selfish. Many do not honor our flag nor does the playing of The Star Spangled Banner bring out any pride of our country. Truly some do not even know the words to our country's anthem. Those who won't defend their freedom, do not deserve their freedom. As long as the people of this country have enough money to run their cars, eat and have a place to sleep and little work and vacations, they are happy to let someone else run the country and do their thinking for them.

I have been reading Search and Forum since 1968. I also received your Newsletter, Oahspe, and several of your books. Off and on I have responded to some of your articles. I go back and read Search and Forum often. They bring up topics that I would not ordinarily have an opinion about. That's the reason I take your publications and enjoy reading them; I understand that is the reason you publish Search. Sure is a long time between the issues of Search.

I would like to read some in depth discussion of Alternative 3. Was very surprised at the letter from Alex Saunders. I sure miss Rap's editorials and remarks after letters; I know we all do.

Very sincerely,
Jo Staton

A REAL PIECE OF GARBAGE

To SEARCH:

Once again the crackpot fringe has descended into irrational paranoia— referring to the tempest over Alternative 3. Hearst Corporation bought up the paperback rights and is now selling it via Avon books. That's why other sales were banned.

The book itself is a real piece of garbage, not even good science fiction— but fraudulantly posing as a "docu-drama" or as authentic journalism. Anybody who really believes it, deserves it.

James Oberg

● Thanks to the many readers who showed such interest in the "Alternative 3" question. Many of you wrote, called and even sent copies of the book, which is now published in this country also.

Just as Mr. Oberg says, the book is not banned in the U.S.A. But the fact remains that the book was banned in the U.S.A., according to the Canadian Bookseller who wrote the same thing to the Aho's and to me. It is also a fact that the book Mr. Saunders mailed to me as a gift was confiscated at the U.S.-Canadian border. The fact remains that even Mr. Oberg, in his wisdom, has not adequately answered the nagging questions this small incident has brought to mind. Very possibly there is a simple answer—but what is it?

Having been in the publishing business for thirty-seven years, we have personally discovered that having the exclusive American rights to a book does NOT automatically insure that violators cannot infringe upon your territory. They can and they do. It is up to the wronged publisher to sue for justice. Never does the vast resources of the U.S. government move to protect your rights at the borders of the country. At least, they never did this for us. In one instance when we obtained exclusive North American rights to a certain book, the market was flooded with a much cheaper edition from England before we even completed the binding of our much nicer edition. We lost a lot of money on that book! Why did not the government officials ban the entry of that book at the border since we owned exclusive American rights??

Considering past experiences, does it not seem reasonable to question (1) Why the book "Alternative 3" was confiscated by government officials 'rights' (before a violation occurs) by our government only for the rich, the powerful or the large corporation?

A tempest in a teapot, or otherwise, can almost make one forget all about what you were questioning in the first place, can't it? No one wants to be ridiculed. We sure do feel foolish to be caught making a fuss about nothing, don't we? But still the innocent little questions remain unanswered.

There are those who seem to become uneasy whenever anyone questions the generally accepted status—quo.

One wonders why thoughtful reasoning, or even a bit of honest speculation should call forth immediate vituperative scorn and ridicule. What is it they fear? Could it possibly by something in that book. . . ?—marjorie by T. Scott Crain Jr.

The Kinross Disappearance: What Really Happened

In November 1953, an F-89 interceptor piloted by Lt. Felix Moncla and Lt. R.R. Wilson vanished while pursuing a UFO over Lake Superior. It is probably the best known—and best documented—case on record of a possible UFO-abduction of an American aircraft.

As recently as May 1976, declassified military documents released to the public show the Air Force still hasn't the faintest idea what happened that fatal night, and both pilot and observer are still officially listed as dead.

In light of the recent disappearance of Frederick Valentich over Bass Strait, Australia last October 21, we now have on file at least five separate incidents involving military or civilian aircraft that were in contact with ground control either by radio or radar and shortly afterward simply disappeared off the face of the earth.

The first case that started this rare pattern of aircraft abductions is the now famous 'Kinross case.' What happened that bizarre evening is best described in The UFO Evidence, published by National Investigations Committee On Aerial Phenomena back in 1964.

NICAP writes, "On the night of November 23, 1953, an unidentified flying object was detected over Lake Superior by Air Defense Command radar. An F-89C all-weather interceptor was scrambled from Kinross AFB, near the Soo Locks in northern Michigan. Guided by radar, the jet sped northwest across the lake on an intercept course. On the radar screen, ground controllers saw the F-89 close in on the UFO blip, and then the two blips merged and faded from the screen. From all appearances, the aircraft and the UFO had collided. No trace of the jet has ever been found."[1]

The controversy here hinges on whether or not the F-89 collided with or was in some incomprehensible manner destroyed or absorbed by a UFO; or did the F-89 simply chase a temporarily unidentified Royal Canadian Air Force plane, made the identification, and immediately proceeded to plummet into Lake Michigan. If the F-89 was encountering flight problems, the pilots made no mention of difficulties on their radio, and even though radar operators could pinpoint the last position of the F-89 on their screens, rescue efforts could find no trace or even minimal wreckage of the F-89 in the lake.

The following facts we are sure of.

1). The F-89's last recorded position on radar showed the aircraft to be at an altitude of about 8000 feet, located 160 miles northwest of Soo Locks, and about 70 miles off Keeweenan Point.

2). No trace of the fully-equipped all-weather F-80 interceptor or it's crew has ever been recovered.

3). The R.C.A.F. deny having any information regarding one of their planes flying in the vicinity on the evening in question.

The facts which haven't been determined are the discombobulating conjectures made by the Air Force that leads us to believe they have no idea what occurred that night over Lake Superior.

It Was An Unknown

The original report and probably the most accurate one came from the Public Information Office at Truax Air Force Base, Wisconsin. They simply stated they had lost contact with the F-89 after it "collided" with a mysterious object and appeared to merge with the UFO. There is no further mention of tracking the jet or even its existence.

It Was A Canadian Aircraft

Later, the U.S. Air Force asserted that the unknown was identified by Moncla and Wilson to be a Royal Canadian Air Force C-47 transport, which was en route from Winnipeg, Manitoba to Sudbury, Ontario.[2] The Air Force information sheet goes on to say that after identifying the friendly plane the American aviators were returning to Base. "From that time, 'nothing of what happened is definitely known'."

In 1961, A NICAP member pursued the case further through his inquiry directed to the Royal Canadian Air Force. A reply from Flight Lieutenant C.F. Page, a representative for the Chief of the Air Staff, said its "records has revealed no report of an incident involving an R.C.A.F. aircraft in the Lake Superior area" on the noted date.[3]

A second NICAP member wrote another letter in 1963 and the reply was quite specific in its denial of an alleged intercept. Squadron Leader W.B. Totman, acting Director of Public Relations (RCAF) said ". . .after extensive checking by the Directorate we have been unable to come up with any information regarding the intercept of a RCAF C-47 by a USAF F-89 on November 23, 1973."[4] Spokesman Totman concluded his letter by explaining that if a ". . .C-47 was traveling on a flight plan taking it over Canadian territory; this alone would seem to make such an intercept unlikely."[5]

Re-examining The Facts

It's evident that RCAF has no record of a flight being in the designated area at the noted date and time, when the Air Force lost its plane. If a flight plan was filed, as was claimed, radar stations in the vicinity would have been aware of the plane's whereabouts and any kind of intercept by U.S. Forces would not have been needed. Add the fact the intercept took place over Canadian territory, and one wonders why we were bothering.

Recently I acquired a copy of the Microfilm History of the 4706th Air Defense Wing July-December 1953. The original document was apparently classified at the time and was declassified in 1973. In that document it says an F-89 ". . .took off on an active Air Defense mission and disappeared. GCI had control of the fighter and was directing it from 25,000 feet down to 7,000 feet. The fighter and bogey blips merged on the GCI radar scope and there was no further transmission from the fighter. The bogey was not aware of any aircraft in the area, and GCI saw no blips break off from the target. Both pilot and observer are missing and officially listed as dead."[6]

In another document extracted from the History Of The 665th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, Calumet, Michigan July-December 1953, we discover several more interesting details.

In this declassified report, we find the Controller on duty, 2nd Lt. Douglas A. Stuart directed the F-89C on an active Air Defense mission, and during the final stage of the intercept the blips merged on the scope. Radar and radio transmissions were severed. The Canadian Air Force, the United States Coast Guard and the Air Force all participated in the search but no trace was ever found.

In the end, the Air Force says in a publicity sheet on the case, "It is presumed by the officials at Norton AFB (Flying Safety Division) that the pilot probably suffered from vertigo and crashed in to the lake."[7]

This explanation seems to disassociate itself from the facts prevailing in the case. NICAP looked into the possibilities of vertigo, a state of sensory confusion associated with dizziness and the pilot's inability to comprehend which way is up. In their report, NICAP states, "Judging by weather reports at the time, the pilot would have been on instruments, so that vertigo (dizziness resulting from visual observation) would be an extremely unlikely explanation. Even if the F-89 was not on instruments at the time, there is no explanation why radar tracked it 160 miles out over the lake and then lost contact just after the blips appear to merge."[8]

No Reasonable Explanation

What happened that night over Lake Superior? The facts of the case suggest an Air Force interceptor was deployed to pursue an unidentified flying object as a matter of defense security to this country and possibly to determine the technical aspects involved. No Canadian or domestic aircraft was in the area at the time the F-89C faded off the radar screen. The object Moncla and Wilson was chasing is still unidentified. It seems reasonable to assume, based on the known facts, that the F-89C got too close to a UFO and rammed it, causing either both craft to plummet into Lake Superior or both machines to come together and fade off the radar screen in some unexplained manner. Either way, it does not explain the absence of a radio transmission to the effect of what was viewed before termination. The last radio transmissions could be the key of what was happening, and since they have never been made public, we might assume a suppression of evidence is involved here. This assumption is reinforced by the fact that the Air Force distorted testimony that a Canadian plane was the reason for the chase, when in fact, it wasn't. Since no physical evidence of an F-89C plane was ever recovered, nor of an UFO, we could be left with the unpleasant thought that an UFO stole away with Moncla and Wilson, and simply vanished. Until the facts suggest otherwise, this case remains a mystery.

The UMMO Affair

. . . A SUMMARY

By Antonio Moya Cerpa

Since 1965 over twenty professionals (engineers, writers, police officers, civil service employee, university professors, lawyers, priests, etc.) residing in Madrid, Barcelona, Seville, Valencia, Balboa and other Spanish capitals, have been receiving, under anonymous mailed envelopes, hundreds and hundreds of xerocopies of typed folios showing a peculiar anagram resembling an "H" letter with its arms curved and a vertical trace in the midst. The main addressee of such queer documents were Fernando Sesma, Enrique Villagrasa, Rafael Farriols, Antonio Ribera, Dionisio Garrido, professor Antonio Gallego Fernandez, author Alfonso Paso, as well as Aime Michel and Rene Fouere in France, Pedro Romaniuk in Argentina and Gianni Settimo (of "CLYPEUS" UFO magazine) in Italy. The postage stamps of these already celebrated "UMMO Accounts" appeared cancelled in several Spanish towns, and a few of them came from London, Berlin, Stockholm, Paris and Adelaide (Australia).

Catalonian "ummologist" Rafael Farriols has gathered dozens of UMMO reports concerning Physics, Cosmology, Biology and Genetic, Informatic, Astronautics, Theology, Parapsychology, Gnoseology, Law, Psychological War, Theory of Space and Time, love and sexual behavior and other various subject matters as well as fussy descriptions of the civilization and everyday life in their alleged "cold star" named "UMMO", and also about their intentions and goals regarding their confessed activities and tasks on our planet Earth. Some of these typewritten memos are highly interesting as the entitled "THE 'IBOZOO UU' OR THE STRUCTURE OF PHYSICAL SPACE, TIME, MASS, ENERGY AND GRAVITY" (a true masterpiece and an actual Unified Field Theory), "THE

A thinkable possibility of their nature exists surely on some concrete universe of this endless "Pluricosmos". Descriptions given are "OUR SPACE-SHIPS", (51 dense pages on their purported complex interstellar vehicles); "LOVE AND MARRIAGE" (male and female emotions, erotic relations and oral sex in UMMO); "OUR CONCEPT OF GOD"; "THEORY OF KNOWLEDGE"; "THE BIOGENETIC BASES OF COSMOS"; "THE PARAPSYCHO-LOGY"; "OUR FIRST CONTACT WITH EARTHLINGS"; "OUR SOCIAL STRUCTURE"; "OUR RELATIONS WITH EARTH MEN"; "ELECTRONIC COMPUTERS", and so on.

The House Guests

In accordance with this curious literary raw material "they" come from a planet "UMMO" in the orbit of star "Wolf 424" 14.6 years-light away, disembarked on March 28th, 1950 at La Javie (Low Alps, France), lived from 1952 to 1954, guests of Mrs. Margarita Ruiz de Lihory (aristocrat lady abiding in Mayor Street number 58 at Albacete City, Spain), performing psychobiological experiments with animals, held long informative calls phone with several Spaniards (Enrique Villagrasa, Dionisio Garrido, doctor Gallego Fernandez (head of Physiology Department of Complutense University of Madrid, to whom gave a sophisticated histological apparatus), three captains of Pineda Artillery Headquarters in Sevilla, etcetera), hired an office clerk in Madrid for typing the bulky pile of UMMO papers, and announced previously the landing of an unidentified object with the ")+(" UMMO mark on June 1st, 1967, at San Jose de Valderas, in the outskirts of Madrid, whose supposed snaps appeared on Ribera-Farriols book "A PERFECT CASE".

It is said that Central Intelligence Agency has got photos and abundant data about "UMMO" unidentified agents. To date Spanish investigators have not been able to arrive to any solid conclusions on this mysterious disconcerting, complex and of course damned UMMO case.

In June 1971 for three days fifty ummophiles attended in Madrid the First UMMO Symposium in order to hear 30 hours of tape-recorded informations, and the Second Symposium took place at Ritz Hotel of Barcelona in May 1973 sponsored by worldwide UMMO "Pontifex" Rafael Farriols. Fernando Sesma has printed the book "UMMO, another unhabited planet", and "FLYING SAUCER REIVEW" of London gave to public several articles of UMMO matters by Antonio Ribera. Now Spanish UFO investigator Senor Antonio Moya Cerpa (San Francisco Javier 4, Castilleja de la Cuesta (Sevilla, Spain) offers to worldwide public opinion an interesting, laborious and comprehensive "UMMO DICTIONARY" based on Ummiti words from UMMO accounts submitted by Senor Ignacio Darnaude Rojas-Marcos, in order to other experts in Linguistic science can work out explanations on semantic laws and idiomatic characteristics of UMMO language. We hope to see promptly published a solvent grammatical UMMO analysis on the basis of this "UMMO DICTIONARY".

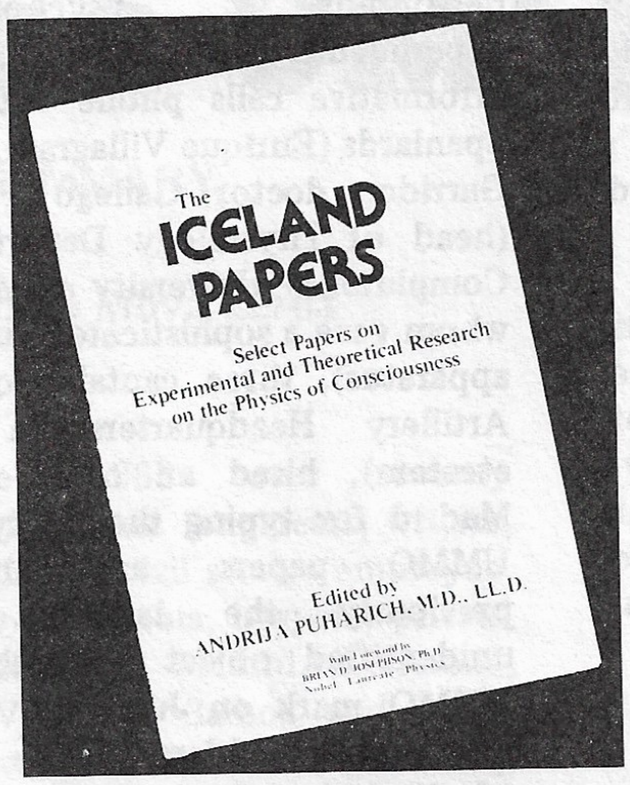
—A SCHOLARLY, SCIENTIFIC BREAKTHROUGH IN THE FIELD OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA. . .

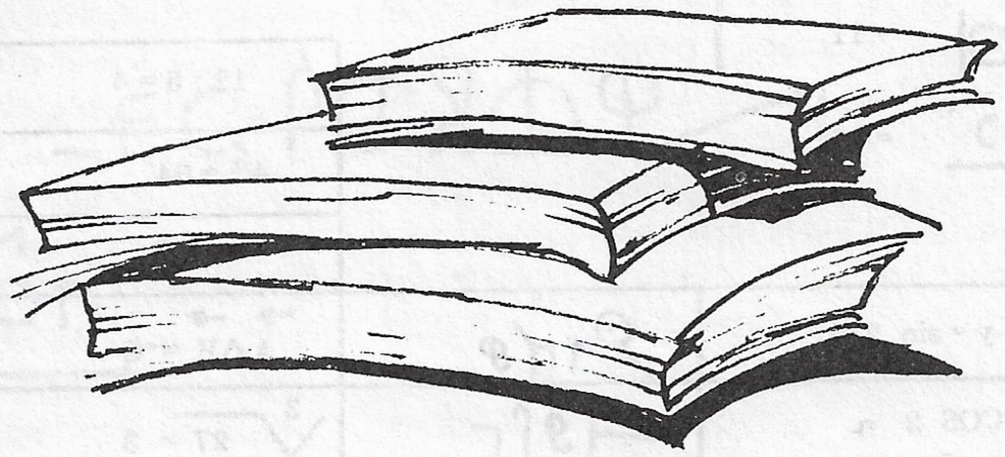


"As paper after paper was read, the atmosphere became electric as everyone present began to realize that a breakthrough was in the making."

"Data fortified theory, and theory clarified data."

"Scientists began to seriously study the powers exhibited by this large number of children."

"It was at this conference that the researchers began to realize that they were on the verge of a deep new insight into the nature of the universe, and into the nature of man."



A RARE OPPORTUNITY FOR SEARCH READERS. An important book, just off the press, "THE ICELAND PAPERS" is a scholarly, scientific BREAKTHROUGH in the field of psychic phenomena. It is a beginning in understanding of the here-to-for unexplainable. We recommend it highly.

If you have ever been ridiculed because of your interest in the psychic, this book is your answer. Put it to the test, take it to the universities, take it to the experts, but mostly think about it yourself. HERE, AT LAST, IS SCIENTIFIC PROOF!

Very limited edition. We suggest you order now, while supply lasts.

UFO AND RELATED PHENOMENA

Dear UFO Researchers and Persons Interested:

The purpose of UFO and Related Phenomena News is to get UFO information and subjects related to it across to people to stimulate their thoughts and feelings concerning the subject so that perhaps some effects and results will come about in the future that will have positive chain reactions.

Naturally no one person can accomplish the complete work or goals desired concerning this UFO phenomena that is so deep and complex of which there appears to be no end or limit. However one person can help add a few pieces to the puzzle being worked on.

When a person is curious on this subject or would like to perhaps subscribe to a UFO publication they want worthwhile information or their money's worth. So anyone who would like a sample copy may get an issue by writing to me at P.O. Box 270, West Terre Haute, IN 47885.

UFO and Related Phenomena News is printed once every two months. Issue number one was printed in January-February, 1979. Issue number two was March-April, 1979. Issue number three was May-June, 1979. Issue No. 3 is 12 pages and deals with Cattle Mutilations of which I have quite a few copies left. Issue No. 4 is now being printed and is 16 pages, 8½ x 11.

Beside SEARCH MAGAZINE, here are listed some of the UFO organization and publications that we recommend Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America, Inc., Gabriel Green, P.O. UFOLOGY QUESTIONS

An interview broadcast from Seville, Spain, on December 28th, 1977 by "Radio Nacional de Espana". (Spanish "National Broadcasting System")

The investigator, Ignacio Darnaude Rojas-Marcos, is 46, married and the father of three children. He took his degree, in Economics, at the University of Seville. The questions he answers were posed by Alfonso Contreras in a programme of the series entitled "WE ARE NOT ALONE".

HOW LONG HAVE YOU BEEN INTERESTED IN UFOLOGY? About 22 years, or a quarter of a lifetime. Time enough to have taken four University degrees, but without attending lectures and from teachers who are voices crying in the wilderness. There was, of course, no graduation day or final diploma, because—as we shall be seeing in the course of the programme—in this discipline you never do get to the point of taking your degree. The more deeply you get into the matter the more mysteries reveal themselves for further investigation.

DO UFOLOGISTS MIND HAVING THEIR LEGS PULLED? WE KNOW ALREADY THAT THIS IS A SUBJECT... In our job we soon grow thick skins, as harvesters' hands soon harden. We are quite used to this now. But, after three decades of gentle martyrdom, Ufologists have been through the worst. People have not stopped making fun of "flying-saucers" and, instead, are beginning to be worried about the constant presence of "unidentified objects". They are not laughing any more. It is our turn, now, to compassively laugh at them for coming round to accept a subject of vital importance just 25 years later than they could have done.

CAN YOU DEFINE THE PHENOMENON FOR US? UFOs are purpose-built energy-centres, openly carrying out strategical exercises in our biosphere. The first thing that shouts for attention is the vast and disconcerting variety in the shape and size of their ingeniously-devised craft and the appearance of the crews. This would suggest more than one place of origin, and also that they find our astral circus and/or problem planet an enormous attraction. This bullring of ours is chock-full of unearthly visitors, perhaps because there never has been such a show, with Belmonte, Manolete and El Cordobes all on the same bill. "They" have shown us that the Earth is a cosmic refuse-tip onto which, in the interests of efficiency and economy, through the technique of reincarnation, are piled the most retrograde of human left-overs from the process of evolution of a vast administrative area of space. We are, in other words, on the Alcatraz for the hard-core evildoers who were such a nuisance on several million inhabited planets and planes. This would, at least, explain the sinister history of blood, sweat and tears, injustice and irrationality of our ill-starred humanity, as unmanageable as Sing-Sing.

IS THE GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF UFO SIGHTINGS ACCIDENTAL? It does not seem to be. Years of experience have taught me that they appear more frequently in certain surroundings: reservoirs and courses of drinking-water, schools, colleges and universities, hospitals, sports—grounds, bridges, cemeteries, rubbish—tips, cows, dairy farms, barns, high-tension pylon lines, granaries, electric power-stations, factories, mines, powder magazines, military installations, atomic plants, airports, micro-wave towers and television masts, national parks, quarries, etc. From this selective and odd list of activities we can gather that these craft are working to a carefully-elaborated strategic plan. Its details and intentions may not be known to the man-in-the-street, but it certainly is causing headaches at the Military High Command, for the C.I.A. and among the security forces of the great powers.

DO THEY PICK THEIR WITNESSES? Of course they do. Most of them are children and young people, or school and university teachers. And there is nothing strange about this. If you want to influence public opinion without shocking people, the best technique is to work on the perception of children. In childhood the barriers of prejudice have not yet gone up. Children are, thus, more receptive.

WHY ARE THEY SUCH PERSISTENT VISITORS? Their motives are profound, complex and many-sided. Their most immediate aim may well be to shatter our collective anthropomorphic ideology and, more importantly, do it without shocking us, gradually conditioning our beliefs over a period of fifty or a hundred years. They want to get us used to the idea that other beings exist in other kinds of life-receptables, and to influence our earthly anthill without causing trama by trampling on it. Another good reason could well be a justifiable concern among our celestial neighbours about our crazy warmongering and the risk of a nuclear holocaust that might well upset the overall equilibrium of the whole solar system. A desire to help us to evolve and become more humane and spiritual could be a third reason. And so on.

ARE THESE OBJECTS A DANGER TO HUMANITY? Emphatically no! I believe that certain well-publicized cases of apparent aggression were accidentally caused. Just consider that, if they are so far ahead of us, they must surely possess enough martial hardware to have been able to wipe out the human race thousands of years ago. Personally, I incline to the opposite opinion. Not only do I not think they are attacking us, or even thinking of invading us, but that they may well be offering us aid, invisible but very powerful, in a lot of different ways.

WHY DO THEY NOT APPEAR TO US OPENLY? Just try to imagine what would happen if they landed in force on the grounds of the White House! We belong to an ignorant and aggressive species and would thus, certainly, try to repel them by force. In any case, humanity is just not ready for such an eventuality. The panic it would produce would have unforeseen consequences, and the results would be undesirable. History shows that, when a higher civilization comes into open contact with a more retrograde one, the inevitable end result is that the first becomes absorbed by the second and disappears. And this hardly seems ethical. In other words, they are not seeking "blanket" contact because of our evident lack of sociological maturity. Notwithstanding, a highly selective anthologic individual contact is widely performed by intentional UFO force field.

WHY DO THE AUTHORITIES CONCEAL THE TRUTH? Because they are endowed with commonsense . . .and also attached to the power of their own positions. If they did so, economic disaster would follow and set off a drastic chain-reaction that would threaten our beliefs and social, political, scientific, religious and philosophic institutions. The first result of all this would be to eradicate existing privilege and create a juster and more logical order of things in the fashion of other "spatial-zoologies". Vested interest and world-wide dishonesty prevent governments from deciding to throw such carrion to the wild beasts, precisely because the truth would set us free and, at the same time, kick them out of their positions of power from which they oppress the earth. This is why the idea of the existence in space of other human beings who are watching us is deeply subversive and revolutionary and, thus, kept as quiet as possible by capitalist and marxist regimes alike.

WHERE DO THESE CRAFT COME FROM? Possibly from other, more advanced physical planets and/or "parallel universes", "alternating realities", "vibratory frequencies", "planes", "levels", "dimensions" or "ultra-terrestrial realities". I think they "arise" from a combination of such hypothetical sources, incomprehensible to our limited human intelligence.

COULD UFOS AFFECT OUR ECONOMY? If the RAND Corporation has not already done so, let us offer the idea to North American President. To escape from our economic crisis we need to create vast, artificial and unnecessary consumer areas, outside the conventional markets. For thousands of years we have been able to accomplish this vital mission very nicely by going to war. But now our nuclear inventiveness and the savagery of the citizenry have rendered this impossible. To attain world-wide prosperity all we need to do is declare war on something as ambiguous and insubstantial as "the extraterrestrials". The factories of the world could then work to full capacity producing the "defense materials" needed to protect us from an other-worldly calamity. Even the most unlikely roads lead to Rome. . .and to full-employment. And bloodlessly, too! A "Star War" of this sort would keep the wolf from people's doors for several decades. I'm only joking of course! . . .

WHAT ABOUT THE APPARITIONS OF THE VIRGIN MARY? They are complex, sophisticated and very well-planned operations designed to set up waves of popular religiosity on a vast scale. Definitely, they are not hallucinations, on the contrary, they are provoked deliberately for real and objective agencies external to the beholders. Their influence on European human history has been immense. According to the wise Domingo Manfredi Cano, since XII century there are more than 21,000 apparitions on record in Spain alone, although most of our earthly publicity has been lavished on those at Lourdes and Fatima. To quote just one fairly sensational case, on the night of June 10th in the year 1430, in the town of Jaen, Andalusia, the famous "Marian Puppeteers" put on a scintillating and varied religious performance with some 500 "characters" in the cast, all apparitions. It was a fabulous show for the delectation of the locals who gaped in astonishment at the long procession of half-a-thousand anthropomorphic "projections" headed by the glowing Virgin Mary as it wound through the streets, lighting them up and causing a great deal of noise and amazement. The result of this impressive display of "ultrarealism" was the cult of "Our Lady of the Chapel" which has been celebrated in Jaen for a number of centuries.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE "UMMO" CASE? It is so disconcerting that, for the moment, we are forced to suspend judgement. Some of its documents are fantastic, for example the one entitled "THE IBOZOO UU", an authentic post-Einstein Unified Field Theory, or "THE PLURI-COSMOS", which claims that the Creation is an infinite assembly of distinct Universes, equivalent to our individual one, coexisting simultaneously. On the other hand, the writing in these reports is remarkably pure, without any emotive adjectives, a genuine linguistic prodigy. The UMMO papers always staggered me for their dreadful lack of a sense of humour. It seems that extraterrestrials are as serious as English ufologist, The Earl of Clancarty, Hon. Lord Sir Brinsley Le Poer Trench, Esq. It would be worthwhile to verify if, as they themselves claim, the UMMO agents did actually live from 1952 to 1954 at No. 58, Calle Mayor, Albacete (Spain), as the guests of an aristocrat, Lady Margarita Ruiz de Lihory.

DOES THE PHENOMENON INCLUDE ANY "PSYCHICAL VARIABLES"? There is no doubt about this, and quite astonishing ones. It appears that the UFOs are only a small part of a very much grander series of phenomena vastly strange and profound. The same root causes have been behind apparitions to human beings for centuries, although they have appeared in a number of clever disguises suitable for the historical condition of the different peoples, places and cultures. They were angels, visions of the Virgin Mary, small planes in the thirties, "electrical" spaceships in Texas in 1897 and, most recently, the "extra-terrestrials" of our technological and spatial era. This clearly shows a technique of adaptation to the social and mental coordinates of different peoples at distinct stages of human evolution.

IS THE SIGHTING OF UFOS A RATIONAL PROCESS? Basically yes, I think so, because I suspect that any given logical postulate or form of thought applies to the whole cosmos at all levels. However, our sightings of objects and ufonauts constantly amount to what Aimé Michel calls "a festival of the absurd of increasing strangeness". Ufological behaviour often appears to us to be incomprehensible, arbitrary and hopelessly absurd. But, from our level, the trees no longer prevent us from seeing the wood. We can discern that their show is more theatrical than festive. Our visitors are not acting naturally but deliberately playing out their parts in the strangest and most carefully rehearsed of comedies, in front of our astonished eyes. Many a time, members of the cast have registered "astonishment" at discovering that they are being watched by human eyes and "fled back to their jalopy. Other times they have been spotted "repairing" their craft in the open countryside, or busy collecting samples of flora, fauna or minerals. They have even been sighted siphoning water from pools or ditches and tapping power from high-tension cables, and abducting people for "clinical" examination. This, Gentlemen, is pure play-acting! There are a thousand ways in which our visitors from beyond could do all this without being seen. Such behaviour is put on for appearance's sake, and the rules of the game have been worked out very carefully. In other words, it is their intention to give us the false impression that the craft has broken down, they are collecting supplies of flowers, pebbles or firewood, are engaged in anatomic research, or have run short of drinking-water or electricity. The whole point is, not so much that they put on their ridiculous pantomime, but that elements of confusion are being deliberately introduced to poke fun at and distort the whole theory of ufology, to bereave it of all rhyme and reason. By thus taking the drama out of their real own activities, they minimize their importance in the eyes of the public. This "Operation Disparagement" is staged for a very important reason. They do not want us to be shocked. Simply to prevent our taking them too seriously and too soon, they want us to get used to them gradually, over several decades. And, indeed, their tactics are very intelligent and demonstrate an advanced stage of psychological achievement.

IS UFOLOGY AN END IN ITSELF? Certainly not. Most "beginners" pass from a mere interest in metal objects in the atmosphere that might well come from Mars to the final realization that these apparatuses are no more than a point of departure, an incentive or pole of attraction. As soon as you pass this critical point you reach an invisible "other world" peopled with fascinating realities where the Transcendental is in the atmosphere, with the answers to the questions human beings have always asked about the "How" and the "Why" of life. I have come to the conclusion that the most important thing about reality is its enormous complexity, which may, indeed, be infinite. The deeper we delve into the "cesspool" of existence, the more solid, richer and more complicated are the things we find. There may be no end to the increasing complexity of the universal pattern. It appears, too, that the Objects are not acting independently but form part of a series of integrated phenomena, basically a mysterious ultrareality, as if they were linked with such apparently distinct experiences as: parapsychology and paranormal events of all kinds, apparitions of Mary, psychophonies, yoga, meditation and mysticism, poltergeists, spiritualism, not forgetting the "Revelation" and carryings-on post-mortem. Recently, some of the most famous ufologists and more acceptable to official science, such as Michel, Hynek and Vallee, have begun to flirt with the idea of what are known as ufology's "psychic coordinates". And, to get back to where we were, it is normal, having passed the useful and necessary stage of these wretched UFOs, to reach a further field of knowledge which turns out to be amazingly fruitful. Ufology, in other words, opens a crack for us in the doors of perception and helps us plunge into an invisible world that is just as tangible as our own, but vastly more thrilling, richer and significative.

WHO ARE THE "CONTACTEES"? Characters shouting themselves hoarse to offer us picturesque "messages" from colourful "Beyonds". And, by openly treating them as a joke, we are committing at least a venial sin, because these amusing and ridiculous people are not, normally, improvising their lines, but saying them as mere instruments of very real forces which are manipulating them as unwitting puppets. The Contact Syndrome is an exhilarating phenomenon and I should define it as the profoundest and most meaningful keystone in the whole of ufology. Firstly, these ill-fated prophets of our time are unconsciously performing a mission that has been planned scientifically. They have been chosen for such travail precisely because of their ostentatious human failings, since they are usually obligophrenic, uneducated and incompetent in the "rat-race", social dropouts who may even behave in a frankly immoral fashion. At times, they may even commit crimes, as did the Brazilian Aladino (Deno Kraspedon) Felix. All this, we repeat, is not accidental, it is, rather, a wise procedural montage with the scope of leaving the masses indifferent whilst obtaining a reaction from the "salt of the earth", those who are not asleep—in Gurdjieff's sense—those who have eyes and see, and ears and hear.

By such devious means they achieve something very difficult, the passing on of certain astonishing and heterodox information which could be seen as frankly subversive by a conservative community profoundly inert. And doing it without producing a sudden shock to its ideological foundations or an upheaval of the status quo. Thus, they respect a rigid and inflexible rule of non-intervention and consideration for the free-will of mankind. By using these feeble specimens of humanity to pass on the truth, they can spread it selectively and under control, tactfully and cautiously regulating the "dropping on the masses" and the effect of its impact on society. So we see that the Contactees are both the victims and the instruments of a complicated operation on an interplanetary scale. Neither they, nor even we ourselves, realize that what they have hold of is nothing less than a new version of the Gospel, adapted to suit the tribulation of our times. Rather than mock them, we should invite them to our table, tell them what magnificent chaps they are, and give them our thanks for their self-sacrifice and rewardless toil. Even if they react (and remembering that "for this were they chosen") with rude noises and aspertions as to our parentage.

IS "CONTACTEE" LITERATURE WORTHWHILE? Of course! A paradigm of contactee stuff is the monumental "URANTIA BOOK", the most rational, methodic and comprehensive picture of alleged exo-reality structure ever issued, at least an intellectual feat of 2,097 folios printed 23 years ago in the U.S.A. (533 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Illinois 60614). Another astonishing contact masterpiece is the collection of twenty-nine "INNER CIRCLE SEANCE MEMORANDA" edited by Dr. Meade Layne (Borderland Foundation, P.O. Box 548, Vista, California 92083), a brilliant, incredibly profound and highly intelligent text, no doubt a wonderful philosophical survey. Comparable to these two magnum opus are "REVELATION, THE BIRTH OF A NEW AGE" published by the Findhorn Foundation of Scotland, and "MY CONTACT WITH FLYING SAUCERS" by Dino Kraspedon. There follows a long queue of those who claim to have received alleged "messages", a crowd which includes: George Adamski, J.B. Newbrough, Ashtar Sheran, "UMMO", Francisco Donis, Ferguson, Dan Martin, Ramatis, Francisco Candido Xavier, Rolf Telano, Mitchel Sisters, Schmidt, Siracusa, Michel X, Gloria Lee, Laura Mundo, Howard Menger, Deremberger, Truman Bethurum, Albert K. Bender, Puharich, Wilburt S. Smith, Van Tassel, Pietro Ubaldi, Hefferlin, Yosip Ibrahim, Swedenborg, B. King, Buck Nelson, Matilde Ariceaga, F. Moisseiva, Narciso Genovese, Salvador Villanueva Medina, Daniel Fry, Fernando Sesma and many, many other instrumentalists who, without knowing it, are playing in an orchestra that is conducted by powerful and highly-organized occult forces. Complex and polyvalent texts have come down to us in this way. If, having sifted the wheat from the chaff, we know how to read, these texts are a very valuable quarry. a splendid source of surprising informations about visible reality and the nature of the invisible. Such odd descriptions of things, maliciously presented as flagrant lunacy and nonsense (here again there is the well-known "deceleration factor") merit very detailed statistical and methdological study by a body of competent scientists. We have within our reach this important aspect of understanding, as yet unappreciated by official science, or even by some ufologists who are short on imagination. But, he who hath eyes to see, let him see. . .

WHAT DO THE CONTACTEES COME TO TELL US? First of all—and unfailingly—the atom business, providing convincing arguments against the destructive madness of an eventual nuclear war. Then, they explain Universal Lovecracy. Their idea is that the most efficient and powerful force operating in the cosmos is love, and the way to demonstrate it is by helping your neighbour. They speak next about the endless evolution of all living beings towards divine perfection, and about the crowds of "sidereal engineers", intermediate beings between God and man, who take an active part in the creation and maintenance of the world. They also enlighten us on theological concepts and our destiny after death. They drop numerous hints on the essence and functioning of the natural laws that govern Creation. To their way of thinking, all religions are equivalent, bridges between the visible and the invisible, each tailor-made to suite the racial and cultural conditions of a given historical epoch.

WHAT IS THE ESSENCE OF "CONTACTISM"? That absolute truth simply does not exist in isolation from the feelings and ideas of the person perceiving, i.e. that truth is irremediably individual and subjective. That all individual paths to evolution are valid and appropriate to the particular person at that moment and under those circumstances. That what seems "good" to me may be "bad" for my neighbour. Nature has not invented fixed forms of Good nad Evil. Each in its turn is a circumstantial and relative concept. This leads to the prevalence of frenzied anti-dogmatism in the thinking of the Universal Hierarchies. Everything changes and evolves, this ubiquitous Law of Change is the only constant in the cosmos. We come here to learn—unendingly—through experience within an environment, and to move from one classroom (a star, frequency level or life-receptacle) to another as we are promoted from one form to the next above it. That our existence is most useful if we struggle, make an effort, and not just fall asleep in a ditch by the roadside. That the justice that rules us is perfect, and generated in successive lives by ourselves from our own actions, thoughts and omissions. And that Love is the very substance of God, the most marvellous experience of all, the apex of Creation.

CAN THE CONTACT PHENOMENON LEAD TO KNOWLEDGE OF OUR FATE AFTER DEATH? At this level, definitely so, and with absolute certainty down to the last, tiniest detail. We have at hand by now abundant and explicit literature about everything that happens after we have crossed that "other barrier", as these authors understand things. In this sense there is no longer any mystery for anyone who will bother to read Allan Kardec, Ramatis, "Christopher", Raymond Moody, Meade Layne, Carrington, Francisco C. Xavier, E. Kubler-Ross, R.C. Crookall, Loher and other "well-informed" writers of whom people in general take not the slightest notice. Fear of the "enigma" of death has, today, become useless and stupid, a mere waste of energy.

WHAT IS THIS "END OF THE WORLD" SO WIDESPREADLY SAID TO BE AT HAND? Another "quirk" of our contact-men. Several of the Prophets of Doom (and especially Ramatis in his book "ASTRAL MESSAGES") are preaching dire tragedy to the earth in the near future caused by a displacement of its axis. And that, after all the mopping-up, "incineration of the refuse", and mass-purification, we are going to enjoy a New Age in which will predominate respect for the natural law, universal brotherhood, widespread love and direct fusion with God. They interpret the messages of so many "envoys" as a final warning before the last grinding catastrophic catharsis.

WHO ARE THE BIG BOYS OF THE SCIENCE OF UFOLOGY? In alphabetical order: Charles Bowe, Gordon W. Creighton, John A. Keel, Peter Kor, Aimé Michel and Dr. Jacques Vallee. And of course Ray Palmer.

WHICH REVIEWS DO YOU RECOMMEND AS THE MOST RELIABLE? The "FLYING SAUCER REVIEW", "sacred cow" of International Ufology has achieved insuperable prestige for its impeccable independence, intellectual boldness and scientific accuracy. May God grant us many years more of Charles Bowen and Gordon W. Creighton, who, from the lighthouse of their London "S.S.R." publication, illuminate the tempestuous waters of world ufological investigation. We need their gifts of exceptional wisdom, aggressive ideas, anti-dogmatism, discretion and a sense of humour. (Humour is the Ufologist's most revulsive weapon, because it is constantly returning him—and all who are in contact with him—to his rightful place in Creation, a speck of mouse-dung). The magnificent "LUMINERES DANS LA NUIT" and "PHENOMENES SPATIAUX" are published in France, Belgium has "L'ARGUS" and "INFORESPACE", Italy "CLYPEUS" and "NOTIZIARIO UFO". In the United States there are "APRO BULLETIN" and "MUFON UFO JOURNAL", Canada has "CANADIAN UFO REPORT" and Spain produces "STENDEK". And no doubt "SEARCH" Magazine.

WHAT HINTS HAVE YOU FOR THE NEXT GENERATION OF UFOLOGISTS? Well, as the master, Aime Michel, suggests: "To consider everything and not believe in anything"; burn out prejudice and cultivate an absolute intellectual integrity, following assumptions to their ultimate logical conclusions, and do not discount a priori any possibility however strange it may appear at first sight, since the most spectacular attribute of the Creation might be its almost infinite complexity, as J.B.S. Haldane's epigram proclaims: "The universe is not only queerer than we imagine, it's queerer than we can imagine". And "Against the immense UFO mystery, the only certainty is our stark ignorance" (Alvin H. Lawson). To hell with dogmas of all colours, let us think for ourselves, and accept all the consequences this involves. May our saddlebags be loaded with truth because—Somebody has said this already—She will undoubtedly set us free, although at first She may appear absurd, traumatic and incomprehensible. Let us, Friends, approach the "Festival of the Absurd", as Michel calls it, with a firm step, armed with courage, dancing cheek-to-cheek even if, at first, we get Plain Jane for a partner, because if we carry on fearlessly, one fine day, our Cinderella may change in our arms into the beautiful and splendid Princess everyone has dreamt of. . .

A STORY OF THE CONTROVERSIAL "SHAVER MYSTERY"

EXCITED by the first incredible, "I Remember Lemuria," as originally published in the March, 1945, issue of Amazing Stories, and FASCINATED as the mystery continued to unfold, Jim Wentworth felt he must write a comprehensive report of this entire strange and gripping story that the Pennsylvania welder, Richard Shaver, was presenting as true.

Thus the book,

GIANTS IN THE EARTH

came to be written. It is the story of secret caverns of the earth, still inhabited by degenerate beings; of ancient civilizations on earth; of space ships, then and now; of how Richard Shaver came across this knowledge through listening to the playback of ancient "thought records."

THE END OF ALL TAXATION

Our City, State, and Federal Governments can now end taxation of all kinds. This includes sales taxes, inheritance taxes, income taxes, property taxes, excise taxes, etc. Plus all hidden taxes and licensing fees, and any other method of raising funds from the people, now used.

Private enterprise has failed the people in the realm of energy. This is self-evident in the gigantic high priced energy "rip-off" that is now taking place all over the world with its resulting inflation.

Therefore, the government must take over all production of energy by producing enough for their own use and enough for the needs of the people. This must be done as a partnership between the government and its people. Energy sales to the people will end taxation. . .forever.

Energy interests now own, or have the rights to most all of our possible sources of energy like oil, uranium, or coal; and they aren't about to relinquish those money-making "high cost" energy projects in favor of any project that can produce "low cost" energy.

However, all their plans call for "influencing" our government to plan on their producing "high cost" energy instead of low cost money. They plan to give us high cost energy even as they ask us to conserve.

Coal will not satisfy "modern" civilization's need for increasing energy usage. It will still be high priced and inflationary. It will pollute the environment and hurt human health. Removal of billions of tons of coal will weaken the continental plates, causing horrible convulsive earthquakes that could destroy our Country.

There is no need for us to continue to use high price inflationary energy when there is an unlimited low cost energy source readily available to us, that is nonpolluting and reusable. This energy source is from "water" by electrolysis, using low cost compressed air to produce the power for the process of electrolysis.

Hydrogen, when burned, reunites with oxygen again, and forms pure water again and that's why it is unlimited and reusable forever. Sewage water (polluted water) or sea water can be used. . ."doing" away with the need for water treatment plants because pure water will be the result when the "hydrogen" is burned in steam turbines or fuel cells for the generation of "low cost" electricity in perpetual abundance.

Only the government could produce low cost energy...private enterprise would not...if it could. With taxes eliminated and plenty of low cost electricity, an abundance of "food" could be grown indoors under lights in any climate...ending malnutrition and starvation forever.

Low cost energy from a limitless source...can only use air that is compressed (not by presently used methods) by "means" of the weight of gravity, motion, and leverage...otherwise it will be high cost energy, not low cost energy. There are many low cost ways to compress air and the author writes about a few in his "energy solution" articles.

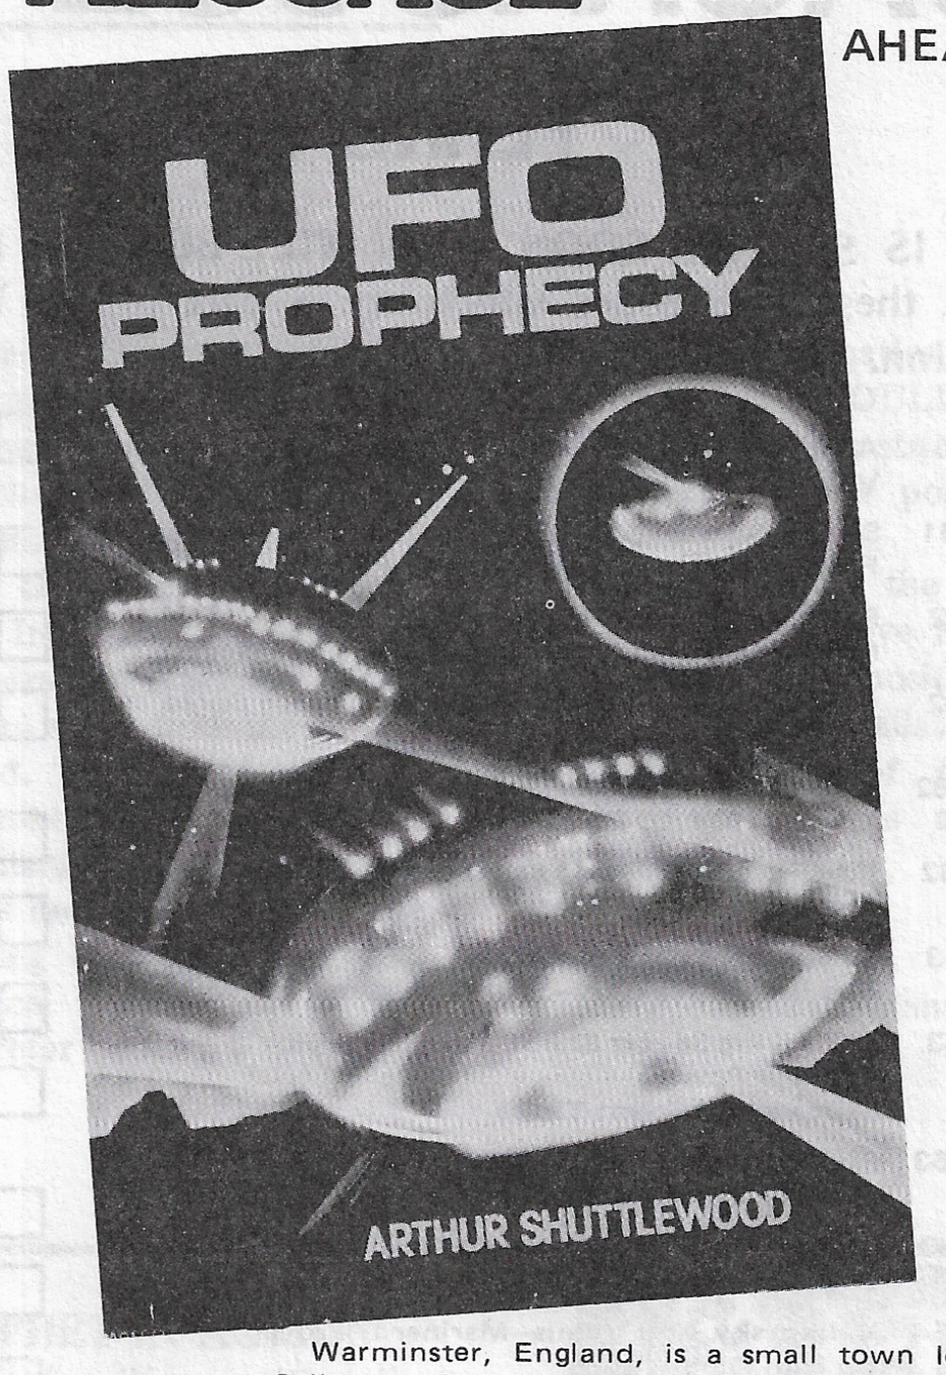
UFO PROPHECY CONTAINS

A STARTLING MESSAGE FOR THE YEARS AHEAD



Warminster, England, is a small town located on Salisbury Plain, just east of Stonehenge. Its 5,000 residents are sane and sober...but they still see UFOs. In fact, just about everyone who lives in this normally tranquil community has seen and experienced "things" in the sky which they are hard-pressed to understand.

Arthur Shuttlewood started out as a skeptic. As editor of the local daily, the Warminster Journal, it was his self-appointed task to try and explain what was going on in the heavens above this usually reserved town. Surely, people must be hallucinating. Such things just couldn't be happening.

They were!

Today Shuttlewood is a confirmed believer. He has had over 500 sightings of his very own and many close encounters with the occupants of these strange craft.

His earnest research into the identity, aims and purposes of thinking intelligences that frequently come into our atmosphere from other worlds and dimensions of existence, makes compelling reading.

FREEDOM WATCH

By PHIL HRUSKOCY

President Carter's changes in his administration leaves much suspicion for political analysts everywhere. His energy speech on July 15, while omitting the importance of U.S. oil to Israel due to contradictory and insane foreign policy in the Middle East, was filled with forceful statements about "sacrifice" and the "National Will." Some American people, who see conspiracies between oil companies and the government, are not ready to go along with cutbacks in energy use. More drastic measures may be necessary by the President. Why talk of the draft? Could it be for manpower needs in a Middle East war, when oil supplies are shut off.

SALT II, omitting satellite weapons systems, moon installations, and the latest developments by the USSR in "Spychotronics", we believe will be ratified by the Congress. The USSR, alleged to have developed psychotronic weapons in the 1950's, first used them against the U.S. in 1963, when the American submarine THRESHER was destroyed with the use of a hyperspatial amplifier and a photograph of the vessel! (Those interested in more documentation may write the author.)

The Eugene Radiowave illness of March 1978, could possibly be another form of psychotronics. The reluctance of the U.S. Congress to look into the allegations has left many researchers, such as William Bise of Portland, Oregon, to believe the bureaucrats will not wake up until it is too late. Bise and Marshall Van Ert ran into the paper shuffling bureaucracy of the Environmental Protection Agency, as well as State and County Health Agencies in Oregon. The hazards of psychotronic frequencies remain to be dismissed by the Federal Communications Commission, and by those within our intelligence community.

A New York City blackout, still not adequately explained by the scientific community, was possibly a military experiment using Tesla's experiments to burn out transformers like the one at the Con Ed facility at Indian Head, New York. In Mexico City and Sydney, Australia blackouts also occurred at the same time the one in New York did. The use of electrical power to control minds, spread disease, or disrupt communications worldwide has been perfected by the USSR according to alleged authority of technological capabilities of the USSR, Dr. Peter Beter, Ft. Worth, Texas. This information, on a public health hazard, SHOULD BE MADE KNOWN to every patriotic American who is aware of the possible dangers it poses to each of us.

Confirmation of the rumour that the Arab nations have PULLED over $350 billion in deposits out of the U.S. banks in retaliation for this nation's support of the state of Israelis not available at this time.

A PROPHET IN ACTION

Anyone familiar with that incredible book, OAHSPE, will find this new book tremendously interesting!

Justin E. Titus is a minor Y-e-shuah (I-e-su) in the true Essene manner, and this book was produced by inspired light through inner vision, by means of the mind's eye. Y-e-shuah means "spiritual birth." This book expands many of the concepts of OAHSPE.

Published jointly by the author and Ray Palmer, who recommends it highly.

Hard cover, beautifully illustrated with a celestial cell, the "egg" of the birth of the "new world" in the Kosmon Era.

This editorial was written in 1964 and printed in the October 1964 issue of FLYING SAUCER Magazine.

SURPRISE, SURPRISE

The first "space baby" was born last Monday to the alleged Russian astronauts—oops, cosmonauts—Andrian Nikolayev and Valentina Nikolayevna-Tereshkova, who were married last Nov. 3.

Thus, the baby arrived on earth seven months and five days after the marriage. Obviously, orbiting in space speeds up certain natural processes. Perish the thought that there are shotgun weddings in Holy Russia.

The newspaper clipping we reproduce on this page is published for a different purpose than the newspaper had in mind (in our opinion). We don't want to point any virtuous fingers at Andrian Nikolayev and Valentina Tereshkova because their baby came early. Quite the reverse, we want to recognize these two as true heroes, and we don't distinguish between a Hero of the Soviet Union, and just plain Hero. These two displayed daring, courage and disregard of danger far above and beyond the line of duty, and what they found out in Space benefits us as well as the Russians. But the fact of this Russian wedding is something we want to dwell upon, because all through our history in the publication of this magazine we have stressed one vital point—that maybe Space isn't a natural habitat for Man, and that it might just be FORBIDDEN. Not in the sense that is verboten because it just isn't natural, and may be reserved for an entirely different kind of life, and that in it we are "fish out of water", who may survive for a time, but cannot do it as a regular thing, and that no matter what we do, we might find the environment too forbidding to exist in except as has been done by these two Russians, and by all the other Russian and American astronauts who have been "out there".

We all know that John Glenn fell in his bathroom and knocked out his inner ear balance mechanism. You can believe it if you want to, but this editor prefers another explanation. We believe that Glenn's exposure to the non-gravity, different-magnetic field nature of Space caused this strange malady. We believe it because at least two Russians suffered a very similar sickness. One may even have died as a result. We believe it because we are still mindful of the strange "loss of weight" of a metal object recovered from orbit, and its continuing loss of weight. We believe it because for more than twenty years we have worked on a theory of outer Space that says "out of bounds" and "off-limits" to you and I corporeal human beings. And in our theorizing, the thing that happened to Glenn and the Russians was predictible (and we did so predict).

Medically speaking, survival in space is the REAL problem that faces us, not HOW TO GET to the Moon or other planets. We can get there, no problem. All it takes is money and time. The means are already available, and the technique.

To get back to Valentina's baby, this is how we think it happened: The Russian government and Russian scientists know more about the menacing aspects of the space environment than we do. They know more about gravity in space (or lack of it—and even planets without gravity!). They know more about what an electro-magnetic field is. And before they go anywhere in space, they want to know if there truly isn't an insurmountable "Verboten" sign hanging out there. They want to know, also, if it is possible to go to the planets, whether we can arrive there in healthy enough condition to reproduce our kind, and therefore make colonization possible. So, they sent this man and woman into space on a many-orbit flight (so as to give a truly sufficient exposure to the space environment to make the results valid), and agreed beforehand that when they returned, they would attempt a pregnancy. The marriage (which was not prompted by love, obviously, but by practical scientific research would only be necessary IF the pregnancy succeeded. The pregnancy resulted, and the marriage was performed (because of public moral opinion, of course, and a warmer public relations with other nations who still regard marriage as a sacrament, and evidence of morality.

Now, of course, we have one answer—several days in space does not endanger fertility. We want another answer—what does it do to genes, chromosomes, heredity? We HAVE to know! The Russians are finding out in the only way possible. It's not cold-blooded, immoral, or objectionable. Either we regard the safety factor in Man's venture into the environment of Space, or we send him out on suicidal missions with a "don't give a damn" attitude. Also, we adopt the practical viewpoint of planetary colonization's possibleness, and the search for ways and means to make it successful, and for ways to avoid unforeseen disaster.

So let's not point the finger of shame at the "shotgun" wedding of Nikolayev and Valentina. They are taking the risks that your sons and daughters who may one day go into space may not have to face because of their heroism and self-sacrifice. Somebody has to do the "dirty work".

Just for the record, let's put down a few things we have suspected from our many years of UFO and Space research. 1) Gravity does not vary inversely with the square of the distance from the planet, but rather, cuts off abruptly at a specific altitude, perhaps even as little as several thousand miles. 2) Matter (such as our bodies, or our entire planet, or meteors) cannot exist permanently in space due to the lack of an electro-magnetic field to give it the cohesiveness we call corporeality. We say this because we know some matter exposed to this condition has suffered a wasting sickness we don't understand. 3) Not all planets have gravitational fields. Landing on them presents a different problem than landing on one that has. 4) Each planet manufactures its own light, and light (per se) does not travel through Space at all. Thus, "light speed" and its "constant", is an illusion fostered by our lack of observation in any environment other than a planetary electro-magnetic-gravitational field. 5) Other planetary bodies may be inhabited, but not necessarily by humanoids. 6) There are other "types" of matter, such as "negative" matter, "indetectible by our five senses" matter, or even different "vibratory rate" or "time-continuum" matter. 7) Growing matter, and decomposing matter, in the sense that there is a creative cycle in which matter is "used over and over" by the process we know first as "disintegration" (atomic fission) and "integration" (atomic fusion). 8) That the "Ether" exists, but differs from matter only in the sense that it is matter in its "dissolved" state, whereas matter itself is Ether in its "integrated state".

We could add many more to this list, but this is a bottle of "8-up" that ought to keep you busy thinking for many a day!—Rap

LOST OCCULT SCIENCE BOOKS – RESTORED!

These eight books are part of the new series being made available once more after as much as 284 years since they were printed! It is our opinion that too much valuable information has been lost simply because the books went out of print years ago. The books are extremely valuable, and quite exciting in view of the fact that their content is extremely viable today! Nowhere in the world can you buy these books (some are collectors' items at hundreds of dollars) for such low prices (most are not available at all!)

ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF DEATH, THE—J.R. Francis—$7.00+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-47-4
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 400 pages, 45 illustrations, large type)
Death and the spirit world critically examined. An immense amount of lore on the subject of death. A treasure-house of examples of deaths and phenomena and evidence. Hundreds of cases are studied in detail, each one an absorbing true story in itself.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM—Moses Hull—$7.00+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-44-X
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 400 pages, 1 illustration, large type)
Everything the Bible says about spiritualism. Eliminates the great conflict between biblical Christians and Spiritualists; biblical justification for both proponents. A massive and exhaustively complete eompilation of extreme value.

HISTORY OF MAGIC, THE—Joseph Ennemoser—$8.50+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-45-8
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 496 pages, index, large type)
The occult sciences of ancient civilizations. This book leads into the land of the marvelous, faithfully informs how magical prophecies, demoniac powers, necromancy, Christian witchcraft in different times and among different nations were brought about; not merely the bare facts, but the natural explanation.

A JOURNEY TO THE EARTH'S INTERIOR—Marshall B. Gardner—$7.50+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-48-2
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 456 pages, 12 illustrations, index, large type)
Gardner has "marshalled" an incredible number of factual observations culled from research stemming from the polar explorations of many explorers, including Peary, Sir John Franklin, Lieutenant McClintock, Dr. Kane, Dr. I.I. Hayes, Sir John Ross, Greeley, Adolf Nordenskiold, Nansen, Admiral Melville, Captain Cook, Edwin S. Grew and literally dozens of the best minds of his day who did research on these intrepid explorers whose work raises so many questions as to the actual shape of the Earth. Is it really hollow, and can we ever prove or disprove it? Read the facts about these questions for yourself!

OTHER WORLD, THE—Frederic George Lee —$4.00+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-43-1
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 256 pages, index, large type)
Glimpses of the supernatural. It took the Rev. Lee twenty years to gather the material in this book, and throughout he dealt only with facts and records, rather than with theories. His are historical narrations, all of it personally gained by investigation, researched and documented.

PHILOSOPHY OF MAGIC, THE—Eusebe Salverte —$4.75+.90 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-41-5
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 304 pages, large type)
The occult sciences of ancient peoples. Hundreds of ancient "lost" sciences are covered in this book; from miracles, prodigies, divine intervention, fables accepted as facts, thaumaturgists, genii, oracles, ledgerdemain, mystery schools, the Magi, automata, the art of flying, androids or speaking heads, apparitions, perpetual lamps to initiations, religious rites and immunity against serpents.

VEIL LIFTED, THE—J. Traill Taylor—$3.50+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-42-3
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 160 pages, 12 illustrations, large type)
The best book ever written on spirit photography. The book contains twelve famous spirit photographs plus a paper by J. Traill Taylor describing experiments in psychic photography, plus other material by Rev. H.R. Haweis and James Robertson.

WONDERS OF THE INVISIBLE WORLD, THE—Cotton Mather—$4.75+.70 postage & handling ISBN 0-910122-46-6
(Paper, 5½ x 8¼, 304 pages, large type)
The trials of the witches. Cotton Mather's own account of his famous persecution of the witches of Salem, written in 1693. The self-incrimination of the most sadistic member of the clergy who ever lived; fascinating and incredibly blood-chilling. The accusations, the trials, the executions.

ENJOY THE MUCH BELOVED MARIE CORELLI BOOKS!

ARDATH

Here is a book that places reincarnation in the most straightforward and fascinating light ever woven into a novel.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

A ROMANCE OF TWO WORLDS

Marie Corelli was perhaps the greatest psychic writer of them all. In this novel she treats the world of the spirit, and its relationship to we who are in the world of the living.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

BARABBAS

The story of Barabbas, who betrayed Christ, and what happened to him. Like all men are destined to, he worked out his own salvation.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

INNOCENT

A tale of love—the love of an innocent girl in whose imagination there was much of fancy; but when she faced "his fact", her love was subjected to a bitter test.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

MASTER CHRISTIAN

This is the famous book in which the author draws together the threads of psychic science expressed in preceding volumes. In it she depicts Christ as a child, visiting the world as it is today and sorrowfully observing the wickedness which men practice in His name. This is a massive book crammed with esoteric lore.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

THE SORROWS OF SATAN

Perhaps the most unusual in its "mystic" content of all Marie Corelli's philosophical novels.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

THE SOUL OF LILITH

In this book the author shows how close is the link between life before death and life after death.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

TEMPORAL POWER

A tremendous tale of a King and his two passions—for the women he loved and for power. Both came to a tragic end, but both reached into a mystic realm that brought a strange denouement.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

VENDETTA

A tale of a vendetta toward a vengeance so terrible that even the dead recoil from its horror. Yet, a tale of justice and retribution as it must come to all those who challenge the right.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

WORMWOOD

"And the name of the star is called WORMWOOD: and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died in the waters, because they were made bitter." Revelation VIII, 12. Here is the author's most tragic and compelling novel of man's weaknesses and his moral destiny.
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

ZISKA

A story of reincarnation. The problem of a wicked soul. For the sins he committed, the gods must judge him. But befitting a warrior, Amenhotep, the King, gives him honor—until he faces the woman he wronged!
($3.50 plus postage and handling)

A Photo Album of the Flying Tigers- 14 Air Force in China

China is in the news again after years of silence. Here in pictures is the story of an exciting era. The patriotism and adventure exhibited by the American Volunteer group has rarely been matched in our history when they unselfishly helped the Chinese in their desperate plight.

This look backward may give you an understanding of the Chinese today.
